ABOUT THE AUTHOR

HOLLY SCHADLER is a partner at the law firm Trister, Ross, Schadler & Gold, PLLC. Her practice includes representation of clients on nonprofit tax law, tax litigation, state and federal campaign finance and lobbying laws, and political ethics. She has represented clients in administrative cases before the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Election Commission.

Ms. Schadler is an author of numerous legal guides and articles for nonprofit organizations, including: Non-Profit Organizations, Public Policy, and the Political Process: A Guide to the Internal Revenue Code and Federal Election Campaign Act; The Effect of Citizens United on Tax and Campaign Laws Governing Tax-Exempt Organizations (coauthored with, Laurence Gold); “No Free Lunch? The House and Senate Rules for Nonprofit Organizations”; “The Courts Point the Way to Royalty Treatment for UBIT Purposes”; and “Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002: How Will It Affect Nonprofits?” In addition, Ms. Schadler assisted in the preparation of Alliance for Justice’s publication Investing in Change: A Funder’s Guide to Supporting Advocacy. Ms. Schadler has also lectured at numerous seminars sponsored by nonprofit and political organizations on the laws governing lobbying, political activities, and unrelated business income tax.

Ms. Schadler has litigated before the U.S. Tax Court and U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit on behalf of the Sierra Club and other clients, successfully challenging the application of unrelated business income tax to mailing list rental and affinity credit card income.

Prior to practicing law, Ms. Schadler was Associate Political Director of the Sierra Club. She received her law degree from George Washington University with honors and graduated from Vassar College with honors in Eastern European History. She can be contacted at:

ABOUT ALLIANCE FOR JUSTICE

ALLIANCE FOR JUSTICE is a national association of environmental, civil rights, mental health, women’s, arts, and consumer advocacy organizations. Alliance for Justice works to secure access to justice for all Americans, strengthen the role of nonprofit organizations in public policy, and foster the next generation of advocates.

Through Bolder Advocacy, its nonprofit advocacy program, Alliance for Justice works to increase nonprofits’ involvement in the policymaking process. In addition to publications like this one, Alliance for Justice supports nonprofit advocacy through workshops and individualized technical assistance. Alliance for Justice also monitors legislative activity related to nonprofit advocacy, providing information to the charitable community and lobbying to reduce restrictions on nonprofits.

PREFACE

Meaningful social change in the United States can be accomplished through a variety of avenues: the courts, legislatures, polling booths, and the streets. Pursuing multiple strategies to address social problems requires groups with diverse skills and capacities. Nonprofit organizations are key participants in these efforts.

Nonprofits play a central role in public policy debates about social problems because they offer a unique perspective. They traditionally represent constituencies that have a limited voice in the policy process. In addition, nonprofit organizations are generally less subject to self-interested motivations than other entities and are driven instead by a commitment to the common good. This essential representative role, unique knowledge, and public vision are why policymakers look to the nonprofit sector for leadership, and why public officials have created laws that institutionalize the nonprofit sector's role in the policy process.

To speak up for their causes effectively, nonprofits need the right tools. This guide was produced as part of Alliance for Justice's Bolder Advocacy Initiative, which provides resources to help nonprofit organizations be confident participants in the policymaking process. Alliance for Justice produced this guide to help those who govern and manage nonprofits select the organizational structure that will best enable them to achieve their policy goals.

Different types of nonprofit organizations are better suited to pursue various strategies for policy change:

501(c)(3) organizations (public charities such as Trout Unlimited or Alliance for Justice¹) may use tax-deductible donations to study important policy issues and educate the public, but the amount of lobbying they may do is limited, and they are forbidden from supporting or opposing candidates for elective office.

501(c)(4) organizations (entities referred to as "social welfare organizations" under tax law, such as the Human Rights Campaign and the Sierra Club) may do an unlimited amount of legislative lobbying and a limited amount of electoral activity, but they may not offer the incentive of a tax deduction to their contributors.

Political organizations are exempt from tax under section 527 and are organized exclusively to influence the nomination, appointment, and/or election of candidates to public office. They are not useful as a vehicle to conduct lobbying.

A 501(c)(3) that sees a need for more legislative lobbying on its core issues should consider building alliances with 501(c)(4)s or forming an affiliated 501(c)(4). A 501(c)(4) that is having difficulty raising funds for its educational work can form a 501(c)(3) affiliate. 501(c)(4)s and individuals who want to bring ballot-box pressure on public officials may create or work with political organizations.

This guide describes the advocacy activities that are suitable for 501(c)(3)s, 501(c)(4)s, and political organizations, and describes the laws governing how these different entities may be organized and work together. The guide is intended to build on and complement Alliance for Justice's other publications, which primarily focus on advocacy by 501(c)(3) organizations.

Since 1998, when this guide was first published, there have been sweeping changes in the laws and regulations governing advocacy activities. In the second edition, published in 2006, we noted in particular the passage of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 and amendments to section 527 of the Internal Revenue Code. Since that time, even more fundamental changes have occurred in the wake of the Supreme Court's 2010 decision in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission, allowing corporations and labor unions to make independent expenditures, and the decision by the U.S. Court of Appeals in SpeechNow v. Federal Election Commission permitting a new generation of independent expenditure PACs. These changes are reflected in this third edition of The Connection. Controversy and debate at the national and state level continue over the activities of these organizations, and more changes may occur in the near future. In order to address these changes, Alliance for Justice will periodically provide information on its website about new developments.

¹ Throughout this guide, references to "501(c)(3)s" are to public charities. In 1969, Congress divided 501(c)(3) organizations into two classes: "private foundations" and "public charities." Private foundations are subject to several restrictions on their advocacy activities that do not apply to public charities, and a full discussion of these rules is beyond the scope of this guide. For more information on advocacy rules and private foundations, see Investing in Change: A Funder's Guide to Supporting Advocacy, Alliance for Justice.

Although The Connection discusses the laws governing these different types of nonprofit organizations, it does not offer legal advice. Instead, it is designed to give you the basic information that you and your organization will need to make strategic choices about how to be more effective advocates. It will also help you understand when you and your organization need to consult with an attorney experienced in nonprofit management and advocacy issues and what questions and issues require clarification.

Alliance for Justice appreciates the dedicated work of B. Holly Schadler, a partner in the Washington, D.C. law firm of Trister, Ross, Schadler & Gold, PLLC, as primary author of The Connection. Special thanks are due to Michael Trister, partner in Trister, Ross, Schadler & Gold, PLLC, for his invaluable review and assistance in the preparation of this guide. Allen Mattison, an associate at Trister Ross, also played an essential role in researching and drafting the second and third editions.

Darrin Hurwitz, Assistant General Counsel for the Human Rights Campaign, deserves particular recognition for his exceptional generosity in taking the time to offer significant, helpful comments on incorporating all of the revisions to the third edition required by Citizens United.

INTRODUCTION: TYPES OF EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS AND WHAT THEY MAY DO

A. THE PURPOSE OF THIS GUIDE

A 501(c)(3) public charity that organizes a 501(c)(4) social welfare organization and a 501(c)(4) that creates a political organization can greatly expand their permissible advocacy opportunities. Similarly, a 501(c)(4) that organizes a 501(c)(3) may expand its educational and charitable activities by creating additional funding opportunities. This guide talks about organizing and managing these organizations and the legal relationships and the need to maintain separation between and among them.

Chapter I provides an introduction to these types of tax-exempt organizations and the rules governing lobbying and political activities conducted by 501(c)(4)s. Chapter II discusses the steps for establishing a 501(c)(4) and the specific requirements to protect and preserve the public charity status of the 501(c)(3) once a related 501(c)(4) is established. It summarizes the types of advocacy activities that each organization may conduct and discusses the practical considerations and requirements for structuring and managing the relationships between 501(c)(3)s, 501(c)(4)s, and political organizations. Chapter III sets out the types of political organizations and the rules governing their activities. Chapter IV discusses how to organize a separate segregated fund and the rules governing these entities. Finally, Chapters V and VI discuss the rules governing Independent Expenditure Only PACs (commonly referred to as “Super PACs”) and Nonconnected PACs, respectively.

Organizing and managing the activities of multiple tax-exempt organizations are not always easy and are not the best strategy for every group. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has provided limited guidance on setting up affiliated entities. Adding a new entity also increases the costs and administrative burdens of managing organizations. This guide will identify and address these issues in order to assist in determining whether establishing multiple organizations is necessary or advantageous. The Connection, however, is no substitute for a trained lawyer’s review of particular issues facing an organization. Therefore, it is advisable to consult a knowledgeable lawyer before proceeding.

The scope of political activities depends on the organization’s category of tax exemption.

B. DIFFERENT KINDS OF EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS

1. Tax Exemption and Advocacy

An increasing array of laws and regulations applies to the actions of nonprofits. The most important rules discussed in this guide come from federal tax and election statutes and from the IRS and Federal Election Commission (FEC) regulations that implement those statutes. Generally, the scope of political activities depends on the organization’s category of tax exemption.

A public charity organized under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) generally pays no taxes on its income, and the contributions it receives are tax-deductible by the donor. Public charities are absolutely prohibited from supporting or opposing candidates for public office, but may conduct a limited amount of lobbying.

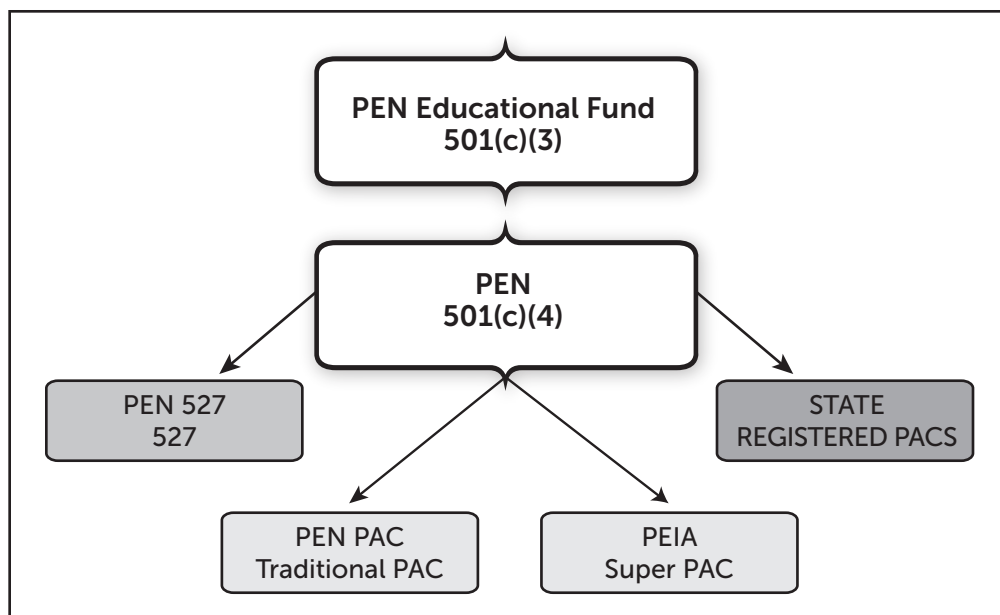

A 501(c)(4) social welfare organization generally pays no taxes on its income, but may not offer its donors a tax deduction. Social welfare organizations may conduct unlimited lobbying and may engage in partisan political campaign work, but only as a secondary activity.

Finally, a 527 political organization pays no tax on its operating income, but does pay tax on its investment income.¹ Donations to political organizations are not tax-deductible. The main purpose of a political organization is to influence the selection of candidates for public office.²

Examples:

The examples in this guide will use fictional organizations to demonstrate how multiple entities may work together. The organizations are:

- Protect the Environment Now Education Fund (“PEN Education Fund” or “Fund”), a charitable and educational organization that is tax-exempt under IRC section 501(c)(3);
- Protect the Environment Now (“PEN”), an advocacy organization that is tax-exempt under section 501(c)(4) of the Code;
- Protect the Environment Now PAC (“PENPAC”), a separate segregated fund (“SSF”) connected to PEN. PENPAC is exempt from tax under IRC section 527 and registered with the FEC to make contributions to or expenditures on behalf of federal candidates;
- Protect the Environment Now 527 (“PEN 527”), a separate segregated fund (“SSF”) connected to PEN and exempt from tax under IRC section 527. It seeks to influence elections, but it does not endorse candidates, contribute to campaigns, coordinate its activities with campaigns, or engage in express advocacy; it is registered with the IRS but not with the FEC or under any state campaign finance laws; and
- Protect the Environment Independent Action (“PEIA”), a Nonconnected political committee exempt from tax under IRC section 527 and registered with the FEC as an Independent Expenditure Only committee (often referred to as a “Super PAC”) to conduct independent expenditures in federal races.

2. 501(c)(3) Organizations

An organization exempt under section 501(c)(3) is required to devote its resources to educational, religious, scientific, and/or other charitable activities. Contributions to a 501(c)(3) are deductible from a donor's federal income tax and are not subject to federal gift tax. In addition, public charities are not required to disclose their donors publicly.

Public charities may engage in only a limited amount of lobbying. Lobbying by a public charity is limited to either an "insubstantial" part of its total activity or to lobbying expenditures that could be as much as 20 percent of its annual budget depending on whether the charity operates under the "Insubstantial Part Test" or elects to lobby under the "Expenditure Test." Lobbying includes activities to influence Congress or a state or local legislature, as well as to support or oppose ballot measures. A 501(c)(3) is strictly forbidden from engaging in any political activity on behalf of or in opposition to a candidate for political office. A 501(c)(3) may, however, conduct various nonpartisan election-related activities. It may:

- engage in limited lobbying, including ballot-measure advocacy;
- conduct public education and training sessions about participation in the political process;
- educate candidates on public issues;
- publish legislative scorecards (with certain restrictions);
- prepare candidate questionnaires (with certain restrictions);
- canvass the public on issues;
- sponsor candidate debates (with certain restrictions);
- advocate in connection with party platform issues;
- rent mailing lists and facilities at fair market value to other organizations, legislators, and candidates (with certain restrictions);
- conduct nonpartisan get-out-the-vote activities, voter registration, and education drives; and
- establish a 501(c)(4).

A 501(c)(4) is a social welfare organization that may pursue educational, lobbying, and some limited political activities.

Alliance for Justice has published a series of nontechnical, plain-language guides describing the advocacy rules for 501(c)(3)s. For an extensive review of the lobbying rules for 501(c)(3)s, see Gail M. Harmon, Jessica A. Ladd, and Eleanor A. Evans, Being a Player: A Guide to the IRS Lobbying Regulations for Advocacy Charities (1995); for more information on the range of permissible voter education activities by 501(c)(3) organizations, see Laurence E. Gold and Rosemary Fei, The Rules of the Game: An Election Year Legal Guide for Nonprofit Organizations (2010); for details on permissible ballot measure activities for 501(c)(3)s, see Gregory L. Colvin and Lowell Finley, Seize the Initiative (1996); for information on foundation funding of 501(c)(3) advocacy activities, see Investing in Change: A Funder's Guide to Advocacy (2004), Myth v. Fact: Foundation Support of Advocacy (1995), and Foundations and Ballot Measures: A Legal Guide (1998).

3. 501(c)(4) Organizations

A 501(c)(4) is a social welfare organization that may pursue educational, lobbying, and some limited political activities. No limit exists on the amount of lobbying a 501(c)(4) may conduct, including working for the passage or defeat of ballot measures. Contributions to a 501(c)(4) are not tax-deductible. In addition, 501(c)(4)s are not required to disclose their donors publicly except under very limited circumstances.

While contributions to organizations exempt from tax under IRC sections 527 and 501(c)(3) are specifically excluded from the gift tax provisions, donations by individuals to a 501(c)(4) in excess of $13,000 are not explicitly excluded.³ Although there has been uncertainty about the application of the gift tax to donations to 501(c)(4)s, the IRS announced in 2011 that it was closing all gift tax examinations of taxpayers who contributed to 501(c)(4)s and that, while it studies the gift tax issue, it would not open new examinations of gifts to 501(c)(4)s.⁴

Unlike a 501(c)(3), a 501(c)(4) may carry out political activities without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status as long as it is engaged primarily in non-electoral activities that promote social welfare. Generally, “social welfare” means promoting social improvement and civic betterment. Education and lobbying on social and economic issues qualify as social welfare activities, but participation in partisan political campaigns does not. A 501(c)(4) may, as a secondary activity, engage in partisan political activities, including independent expenditures (communications that are not coordinated with a candidate or political party and that do not expressly advocate the election or defeat of a candidate), without adversely affecting its tax-exempt status. Such activities must comply with federal or state campaign finance law. In some cases, the 501(c)(4) must pay taxes on some or all of the funds used for political activities.⁵

A 501(c)(4) may:

- engage in all of the lobbying and advocacy activities permitted for a 501(c)(3), without limit;
- endorse candidates and publicize its endorsements;
- publically distribute voter guides and other communications that may support or oppose candidates (with certain restrictions);
- permit candidates to address its members;
- send its mailing lists and provide facilities to selected candidates at fair market value; and
- establish and pay for the administrative and fundraising costs of a connected political organization.

Some of these activities are subject to federal or state election laws, as discussed in further detail elsewhere in this guide.

4. Political Organizations

A political organization exists primarily to influence the outcome of elections. IRC section 527 addresses the tax treatment of all political organizations.

A political organization is generally exempt from taxation to the extent that it spends its funds on political activities and related expenses. Political activities include influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any federal, state, or local public office or an office in a political organization.⁶ Political organization income is exempt from tax unless it is (1) investment income, (2) trade or business income, or (3) income that is spent or set aside to fund activities that do not qualify as political activities.⁷

Political organizations governed by IRC section 527 may be divided into three broad categories:

- federal political committees (Federal PACs) that seek to influence the election of federal candidates and must register with and report to the Federal Election Commission;
- state political committees (State PACs) that seek to influence the election of state and local candidates and must register with and report to state election agencies; and
- other “527s,” most of which must register with and report to the IRS but are not required to register with the FEC or any state agency.

One major distinction among the categories of political organizations is that Federal and State PACs may generally contribute directly to candidates and may make independent expenditures that expressly support the election or defeat of a candidate, while other 527s that are not registered with the FEC or the applicable state agency may generally not contribute to or support specific candidates. The chart that appears later in this section explains the differences in greater depth.

There is now a type of Federal PAC, commonly known as a Super PAC, that may receive unlimited contributions. Prior to the 2010 decision in SpeechNow.org v. Federal Election Commission,⁸ all Federal PACs were limited in the size of contributions that they could receive. A Federal PAC could accept contributions of $5,000 or less per year from individuals or other Federal PACs; contributions from labor unions and corporations were prohibited. While these limits continue to apply to PACs that make contributions to federal candidates and other political committees, PACs that make independent expenditures only may now accept unlimited funds from individuals and other sources. Therefore, Federal PACs are now distinguished into two categories: “Traditional PACs,” which may make contributions and independent expenditures, and “Independent Expenditure Only PACs” (“Super PACs”), which may make independent expenditures but not contributions in federal races.

Generally, political organizations may be organized as either:

- a separate segregated fund (SSF), which is a political organization established and administered by a corporation or union, including an incorporated 501(c)(4) organization, for the purpose of conducting political activities; or
- a Nonconnected committee, which is a political organization generally established by a group of individuals independent of any sponsoring corporation or union.

At the time of publication of this guide, the question of whether a Super PAC may be established as an SSF is unresolved. Note that generally the legal landscape regarding political organizations is in great flux, so it is essential to consult an attorney who specializes in political law before establishing a political organization on the federal or state level. Alliance for Justice will post occasional updates on its website regarding significant new developments.

PACs that make independent expenditures only may now accept unlimited funds from individuals and other sources.

Contributions to Candidates	$5,000 limit per candidate if the Traditional PAC meets certain requirements; ¹³ Super PACs may not make contributions	May not contribute to federal candidates or political parties	May not contribute to federal candidates; subject to state and local contribution laws
Endorsing Candidates and Running Advertisements Supporting or Opposing Candidates	May endorse candidates and expressly advocate the election or defeat of an identified candidate	Generally may not engage in express advocacy (See Chapter 1, (D) for definition of express advocacy); state laws vary	May endorse candidates and expressly advocate the election or defeat of an identified candidate as subject to state and local law
Coordinating with Campaigns or Political Parties ¹⁴	Traditional PACs may pay for "coordinated" communications, but the cost of the expenditure is treated as an in-kind contribution; ¹⁵ Super PACs may not make "coordinated communications"	May not coordinate with campaigns	Activities are regulated by state and local campaign laws

* Some exceptions to the registration and reporting requirements are set out in more detail in Chapter IV of this guide.

Participation in a coalition to exchange non-electoral information or sponsor educational programs on issues of interest to the groups is permissible.

C. WORKING IN COALITIONS AND OTHER JOINT ACTIVITIES

Tax-exempt organizations often choose to work in coalitions to organize conferences, lobby on legislation, or better coordinate their advocacy activities. When the organizations have the same tax-exempt status, few issues arise from this coordinated participation. However, when a 501(c)(3) participates in a coalition with 501(c)(4)s, it is important to structure the 501(c)(3)'s activities as part of the coalition so that they do not jeopardize the 501(c)(3)'s tax status.

A 501(c)(3) may join a coalition composed of 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s for any purpose consistent with its exempt status, such as conducting research or preparing and publicizing materials on a current issue. A 501(c)(3) could also join a coalition to lobby on issues. However, a 501(c)(3) may not do anything indirectly through participation in a coalition that it may not do individually. Participation in a coalition to exchange non-electoral information or sponsor educational programs on issues of interest to the groups is permissible. A 501(c)(3) may also conduct voter registration, voter education, and get-out-the-vote activities so long as these activities are nonpartisan.

Example:

The PEN Education Fund conducts voter education activities with 501(c)(4) groups. These activities are permissible so long as the activities meet the 501(c)(3) criteria and the coalition does not endorse candidates or take other partisan positions. If the Fund were asked to join together with several organizations, including 501(c)(4)s and PACs, in order to publish partisan voter guides before an election, such activity would be prohibited and would jeopardize the organization's tax-exempt status.

1. Coalition Structures

When a coalition intends to be active on an ongoing basis, it may choose to incorporate or organize as an unincorporated association. As a separate entity, the coalition may wish to apply for tax-exempt status under section 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) and obtain its own Employer Identification Number (EIN) by filing an IRS Form SS-4.

Many coalitions are not established as separate legal entities, but operate informally under a variety of arrangements. For example, the members of a coalition may meet to share information or plan joint or common activities with each of the participants paying its own expenses. Generally, in these situations, the expenditures by the other participants do not count toward a 501(c)(3)'s own lobbying limits.

Alternatively, one of the members of the coalition could agree to act as the sponsor of the coalition. Under this structure, the members of the coalition and other funders of the effort contribute to the designated organization. All of the coalition's activities paid for by the sponsor (including lobbying activities) would be considered activities of the sponsor and would be reported on its information return (Form 990) to the IRS. For this reason, 501(c)(3) organizations may be a poor choice to sponsor coalitions that will do significant amounts of lobbying.

2. Joint Activities

Questions frequently arise in determining how or whether a 501(c)(3) may engage in joint activities and information exchanges with 501(c)(4)s, 501(c)(5)s (labor unions), and other 501(c) organizations, as well as political organizations.

Joint nonpartisan activities: A 501(c)(3) may engage in voter education and registration with a 501(c) or 527 organization so long as the activities are conducted in a strictly nonpartisan manner. All of the group's joint written materials and oral communications must be nonpartisan. No partisan literature or communications may be distributed by any of the participating groups as part of the joint activity. In addition, the geographic areas selected for conducting the activities must be determined using nonpartisan criteria. While the other participating 501(c)s and PACs may continue to engage in their own partisan activities, these must remain completely separate from their nonpartisan activities conducted jointly with the 501(c)(3).

Influencing ballot measures: A 501(c)(3) may also work with 501(c)(4)s on ballot measure campaigns. Activities to support or oppose ballot measures and referenda are treated as direct lobbying. Therefore, the amount of expenditures that a 501(c)(3) may make is limited. (See Being a Player, Alliance for Justice, for more information about the limits on lobbying.) If organizations other than the 501(c)(3) are conducting partisan electoral work in conjunction with their ballot measure activities, a 501(c)(3) should not participate in that coalition effort.

Renting and exchanging information: Because a 501(c)(3) organization may not make a contribution, including an in-kind contribution, to a 527, it may not give its lists (or other data such as lists of registered voters) to a 527 without charge. Allowing a 527 to use its mailing list even on a one-time basis constitutes providing something of value even if the 501(c)(3) generally makes its list available to other 501(c)(3) organizations without charge. Therefore, a 501(c)(3) must rent or sell its list to a 527 for fair market value. In addition, the IRS has taken the position that, once the 501(c)(3) makes a list available to a political entity, it must offer and make the list available to any other political entities that request the list.¹⁶ Using a list broker is the safest way to satisfy this second requirement and to establish the fair market value of the list.

A 501(c)(3) may also exchange its list for an equivalent number of new names of equal value to be provided by the 501(c) or 527 within a reasonable period of time, provided that the 501(c) or 527 agrees to pay the fair market value of the list if it is unable to provide the new names to the 501(c)(3) within the agreed period. In order to determine fair market value, it may be helpful to have each list valued by a list broker or other professional list manager.

A 501(c)(3) may accept lists from a 527 or other 501(c) organization to conduct its nonpartisan activities. There must not be, however, any requirement or understanding that the 501(c)(3) organization will use that information to further the partisan interests of the 527 or 501(c). Moreover, the 501(c)(3) may not receive partisan information collected by the 527, such as candidate preference identification data. Finally, the 501(c)(3) may not use lists that target particular geographic areas or individual voters based on partisan criteria. For example, a 501(c)(3) may not use a list that identifies voters who live in Democratic precincts or who have been selected based on their support for a particular candidate.

Voter registration lists: A 501(c)(3) may not freely share the voter registration lists or other data that it collects during voter registration or education activities with partisan organizations. This information is the property of the 501(c)(3) and may only be rented to a 501(c)(4) or 527 at fair market value or exchanged for data of equal value under certain circumstances. (See the discussion of sharing lists above.)

Even if these guidelines are strictly followed, however, it is possible that the media or other groups may raise issues about such cooperative activities, questioning whether the partisan objectives of the 527 are attributable to the 501(c)(3). Therefore, the risk of adverse publicity for your efforts should be considered in your decision whether to conduct joint activities with a 527 organization.

Training and technical assistance: The issue of whether a 501(c)(3) may accept training and other technical assistance from staff and consultants of a 527 organization frequently arises. For example, a 501(c)(3) might wish to provide training to its staff and volunteers on door-to-door canvassing. In the event that staff or consultants are invited to assist with training or provide technical assistance, it is critical that the information provided and programs planned are strictly nonpartisan.

CHAPTER I: LOBBYING AND POLITICAL ACTIVITIES BY 501(C)(4)S

This chapter discusses the laws governing advocacy by 501(c)(4)s, demonstrating some of the strategic reasons for creating a 501(c)(4). Often, a 501(c)(3) will be the original or “anchor” organization with more members and greater financial resources, at least initially, than the (c)(4). However, a 501(c)(4) may also serve as the anchor organization with an affiliated 501(c)(3) organization to raise tax-deductible contributions for limited purposes.

A. WHAT IS A 501(C)(4)?

A nonprofit corporation or association designed to promote social welfare may qualify for tax-exempt status under IRC section 501(c)(4). The IRS has recognized a variety of public policy issues as promoting “the general welfare of the community,” such as environmental protection, firearms control, women’s rights (including reproductive rights), poverty, housing, and civil rights. Groups such as the League of Women Voters, the National Organization of Women, the Human Rights Campaign, the Sierra Club, and the American Civil Liberties Union are 501(c)(4)s. While 501(c)(4)s are exempt from paying federal income tax, contributions and membership dues to a 501(c)(4) are not tax-deductible as charitable contributions.

Contributions and membership dues to a 501(c)(4) are not tax-deductible as charitable contributions.

A 501(c)(4) may engage in an unlimited amount of lobbying, as long as the issues relate to the exempt purposes of the organization. In addition, a 501(c)(4) may engage in some partisan political campaign activities in accordance with federal and state campaign finance laws, provided that its political activities do not become its primary activity.

Tax law requires that tax-exempt organizations, including 501(c)(4)s, benefit the general public, not a private group of citizens. Applying this standard, the IRS has contested the tax-exempt status of groups that it contends are operated primarily to benefit one political party, arguing that conveying more than an insubstantial benefit to a party constitutes private benefit.¹ For example, in American Campaign Academy v. Commissioner,² the Tax Court accepted the IRS’s argument that a political training academy whose trainees were placed almost exclusively in Republican campaigns did not qualify for exempt status under section 501(c)(3) because the academy provided more than an insubstantial benefit to the Republican Party. Similarly, the IRS denied tax-exempt status to several groups that had been organized to recruit and train women to run for political office. The IRS took the position that the groups were not operated primarily to promote social welfare because their activities were primarily for the benefit of a political party and a private group of individuals, rather than “the community as a whole.”³ While it is unclear at this time how the private benefit doctrine will ultimately be applied to 501(c)(4)s, this issue must be considered in organizing and operating a social welfare organization.

B. FEDERAL RULES ON LOBBYING ACTIVITIES BY 501(C)(4)S

1. Tax Code

A 501(c)(4) may conduct unlimited lobbying without jeopardizing its tax-exempt status as long as the legislation that the organization attempts to influence pertains to the purpose for which it was formed. Lobbying may be its sole activity. Specifically, lobbying includes:

- drafting legislation;
- persuading legislators to introduce legislation;
- circulating lobbying materials to assist in the passage or defeat of a bill;

If an organization's primary purpose or activity is partisan political activity, the organization does not qualify as a 501(c)(4).

- engaging members and the general public by letter, phone, or the mass media to encourage their legislators to support or oppose legislation; and
- supporting or opposing referenda, initiatives, and other public ballot measures.

Before proceeding with these activities, however, it is important to check federal, state, or local lobbying disclosure laws and, in the case of ballot measure activity, disclosure laws for any registration and reporting requirements.

A 501(c)(4) must notify prospective contributors that their contributions are not deductible as charitable contributions.⁴ This notice must appear in all written and oral solicitations. The IRS provides various examples of acceptable language for the notice regarding non-deductibility of contributions, including, "Contributions and gifts to [name of organization] are not tax deductible." There are penalties for each failure to include the notice.

Although some taxpayers may, in some circumstances, deduct their dues and "similar amounts" paid to a 501(c)(4) organization as an ordinary and necessary business expense, the portion of dues that funds lobbying and political expenditures is not tax-deductible.⁵ A 501(c)(4) organization may be required to alert its members about what percentage of dues, if any, it has allocated to lobbying and political expenditures.⁶ If the organization fails to give this notice, or if it provides a notification that underestimates the percentage of dues used for these purposes, the IRS may impose a tax on the organization equal to 35 percent of its lobbying expenditures.⁷

A 501(c)(4) is exempt from this notice requirement if:

- 90 percent of all dues and contributions are received from persons or entities paying less than $103; or
- 90 percent or more of the membership dues to the organization come from nonbusiness sources and are, therefore, nondeductible in any event.⁸

2. Federal and State Lobbying Disclosure

The Lobbying Disclosure Act (LDA) requires organizations that lobby the federal government to register and report their lobbying activities. Information about these registration and reporting requirements is more fully presented in Appendix A.⁹ Similar disclosure laws may exist on the state and local level. Summaries of many of these state laws are available on the Alliance for Justice website, BolderAdvocacy.org at <http://bolderadvocacy.org/navigate-the-rules/state-resources>.

One noteworthy provision of the LDA applies exclusively to 501(c)(4)s, stating that a 501(c)(4) that engages in lobbying activities is not eligible to receive federal grants, loans, or awards.¹⁰ Conversely, a 501(c)(4) that receives federal grants, loans, or awards may not lobby. Therefore, an organization should conduct a thorough review of its activities to determine if it must choose between lobbying or accepting federal money. The LDA does allow a 501(c)(4) to form a separate, affiliated 501(c)(4) organization to lobby with private funds.¹¹ Moreover, a 501(c)(4) that conducts lobbying may establish a separate 501(c)(3) to receive federal grants and conduct charitable activities.

C. RULES ON 501(C)(4) POLITICAL ACTIVITY UNDER THE FEDERAL TAX CODE

The primary purpose of a 501(c)(4) must be to promote social welfare, and the IRS has ruled that participation in political campaigns does not qualify as an activity that promotes social welfare.¹² Therefore, if an organization's primary purpose or activity is partisan political activity, the organization does not qualify as a 501(c)(4).¹³ Partisan political activities are those that support or oppose a political party or candidate for public office. See "What Is 'Political Activity'?" below.

In addition to this primary purpose restriction, 501(c)(4) organizations that have investment income may be subject to tax on expenditures for their political activities, unless they conduct these political activities through a “separate segregated fund” organized under IRC section 527. See Chapter IV for a discussion of establishing and operating a separate segregated fund.

1. What Is the Primary Purpose of an Organization?

No clear test exists for determining when political activity becomes an organization’s primary purpose. One common approach is to analyze expenditures. If annual political expenditures are relatively small compared to the organization’s overall budget, its tax-exempt status is generally safe. If political activity expenditures exceed 50 percent of total program expenditures, however, social welfare most likely cannot be deemed the primary purpose.¹⁴ In order to be cautious, a 501(c)(4) should generally ensure that its expenditures for political activity do not exceed 30 to 40 percent of its total budget. The IRS may also consider other factors, in addition to expenditures, to determine whether an organization is primarily engaged in promoting social welfare or political activities, including:

- the staff and other resources (including buildings and equipment) devoted to conducting the organization’s social welfare versus political activities;
- the manner in which the activities are conducted; and
- the amount of time spent by both volunteers and staff on political activities.¹⁵

2. What Is “Political Activity”?

Any activity is considered political if it is conducted to influence the election, selection, nomination, or appointment of any individual to a federal, state, or local public office; to an office in a political organization; or as a delegate or elector for President or Vice President.¹⁶ Such activities include:

- endorsements of a candidate;
- publication or distribution of statements in favor of or in opposition to a candidate;
- direct financial contributions or other support to a candidate, political party, or PAC (other than a ballot measure committee);
- in-kind contributions to a candidate, political party, or PAC (other than a ballot measure PAC) including, but not limited to:
 - » mailing, membership, or donor lists or other resources for fundraising;
 - » provision of facilities or office space;
 - » staff time;
 - » polling results;
 - » organizing volunteers for the campaign;
 - » opposition research;
 - » comparative ratings of candidates;
 - » publicizing names of political candidates who support or oppose the organization’s position on public issues;
- membership communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of a candidate; and
- payment of the administrative and fundraising costs of a political organization.

There are election-related activities that are not considered political activities under the IRC.

There are election-related activities that are not considered political activities under the IRC. These activities may be conducted freely without affecting a 501(c)(4)'s tax-exempt status if they relate to its primary purpose. Such activities include, first, voter education and engagement activity, including candidate questionnaires and debates, issue education projects, get-out-the-vote programs, and voter registration, *as long as they are conducted in a nonpartisan manner—that is, if they do not support or oppose candidates or political parties.*¹⁷ In addition to this requirement, there may be federal or state campaign finance rules that govern these activities. The IRS has published information about these and other types of voter education and registration activities, including a Fact Sheet, FS 2006-17 (February 17, 2006). In addition, Revenue Rulings 2006-4 and 2007-41 provide guidance on distinguishing political and nonpartisan advocacy communications (see below).

Also permissible for 501(c)(4)s are activities such as workshops, publications, and seminars to encourage greater participation in government and politics or better campaign practices, as long as they do not support or oppose a candidate or political party.

3. Distinguishing Lobbying Communications from Political Communications

Distinguishing lobbying communications or other issue advocacy from political communications has become critical for many advocacy organizations, because 501(c)(4) organizations could violate their 501(c)(4) status if they primarily conduct political activities and may be taxed on any such political activities. In contrast, lobbying activities are permitted to be the primary activity of a 501(c)(4) entity, and the organization is not taxed on its lobbying activities.

Factors tending to indicate that an advocacy communication on a public policy issue is a political activity include:¹⁸

- the communication identifies a candidate for public office;
- the timing of the communication coincides with an electoral campaign;
- the communication targets voters in a particular election;
- the communication identifies a candidate's position on the public policy issue that is the subject of the communication;
- the position of the candidate on the public policy issue has been raised as distinguishing the candidate from others in the campaign, either in the communication itself or in other public communications; and
- the communication is not part of an ongoing series of substantially similar advocacy communications by the organization on the same issue. It is not clear from the regulations how many ads must be run to establish the pattern of "an ongoing series of substantially similar advocacy communications," or how a new organization could satisfy this requirement.¹⁹

Factors tending to indicate that the advocacy communication is a lobbying activity include:

- the absence of one or more of the factors listed above indicating that the activity is political;
- the communication identifies specific legislation, or a specific event outside the control of the organization, that the organization hopes to influence;
- the timing of the communication coincides with a specific event outside the organization's control that the organization hopes to influence, such as a legislative vote or a committee hearing;

- the communication identifies the candidate solely as a government official in a position to act on the public policy issue in connection with the specific event (such as a legislator who is eligible to vote on the legislation); and
- the communication identifies the candidate solely in a list of key cosponsors of the legislation that is the communication's focus.

Many of the factors are ambiguous. Moreover, most situations include a combination of these factors, with some pointing toward classifying an activity as political while others militate against that classification. The mere presence of a single factor is not determinative; the IRS examines the facts and circumstances of the activity as a whole. Particularly after the Citizens United decision, which permits corporations to make independent expenditures, there has been increasing pressure on the IRS to enhance its scrutiny of 501(c)(4)s that engage in political activities.²⁰ For these reasons, 501(c)(4) organizations need to be cautious in how they apply the primary purpose test to these activities.

The following examples are adapted from fact patterns provided in IRS Revenue Ruling 2004-6²¹ and modified to apply to PEN, the hypothetical 501(c)(4) organization featured in this guide.

Example:

Senators A and B represent Maine in the U.S. Senate, and Senator A (but not Senator B) is up for reelection in 2012. PEN buys full-page newspaper ads in several large Maine newspapers on a regular basis in 2012, urging more spending on the environment, which would require a legislative appropriation. One of the ads, published shortly before the election, stresses the importance of increased federal funding for environmental protection and cites statistics about Maine's environmental problems, but it does not mention Senator A's position on environmental issues. The ad ends with the statement, "Call or write Senator A and Senator B to ask them to support more federal money to protect our environment." The environment has not been raised as an issue distinguishing Senator A from any opponent. At the time when the ad is published, no legislative vote or other major legislative activity is scheduled in the U.S. Senate on changing federal funding for environmental protection.

IRS Analysis: The circumstances indicate that the expenditure for these ads is a lobbying activity, not a political activity, for PEN. Although PEN's ad identifies Senator A shortly before an election in which that Senator is a candidate, the ad is part of an ongoing series of substantially similar advocacy communications on the same issue during the year. The advertisement identifies both Senator A and Senator B (who is not a candidate in that election), it does not identify Senator A's position on environmental issues, and the environment has not been raised as an issue distinguishing Senator A from any opponent. Therefore, the ad does nothing to indicate that Senator A's candidacy should be supported or opposed on this issue.

Example:

Senator C represents Texas in the U.S. Senate and faces a challenge in his party's primary. Shortly before the primary election, PEN buys several full-page ads in Texas newspapers stating that the environment is important to Texans and that S. 24, a bill pending in the U.S. Senate, would clean up air pollution. The ad also states that Texans with asthma would benefit from cleaner air, but that Senator C has opposed similar measures to reduce air pollution in the past. The advertisement ends with the statement, "Call or write Senator C and tell him to vote for S. 24." The environment has not been raised as an issue distinguishing Senator C from any opponent. S. 24 is scheduled for a vote in the U.S. Senate before the election, soon after the date on which the advertisement is published.

IRS Analysis: Under the facts and circumstances, PEN's advertisement is a lobbying activity. It addresses legislation that PEN is supporting and appears immediately before the U.S. Senate is scheduled to vote on that particular legislation. The candidate identified, Senator C, is a government official in a position to take action on the public policy issue in connection with a specific event (the vote), the timing of which is outside the organization's control. The IRS should consider this to be a bona fide effort to lobby Senator C to vote for the legislation, not to influence the election.

Example:

Senator D represents Wyoming in the U.S. Senate. PEN buys full-page newspaper ads in Wyoming that are published repeatedly, beginning shortly before an election in which Senator D is a candidate for reelection. The advertisement is not part of an ongoing series of substantially similar ads by PEN on the same issue. The ad states that a major Wyoming city needs a water treatment plant, but that it cannot be built without federal aid. The ad further states that Senator D has voted in the past year for two bills that would have provided the federal funds needed for the water treatment plant. The ad ends with the statement, "Let Senator D know you agree about the need for federal funding for water treatment plants." Federal funding for water treatment has not been raised as an issue distinguishing Senator D from any opponent. At the time when the ad is published, a bill providing federal funding for water treatment has been introduced in the U.S. Senate, but no legislative vote or other major legislative action on the bill is scheduled.

IRS Analysis: Under the facts and circumstances, the advertisement is a political activity, not a lobbying activity. PEN's ad identifies Senator D, appears shortly before an election in which D is a candidate, and targets voters in that election. Although federal funding for water treatment plants was not raised as an issue distinguishing Senator D from any opponent, the ad identifies Senator D's position on the issue as agreeing with PEN's position, and it is not part of an ongoing series of substantially similar advocacy communications on the same issue. Additionally, the ad does not identify specific legislation and is not timed to coincide with a legislative vote or other major legislative action on the issue. The IRS would consider this ad to be an attempt to influence Senator D's reelection, not a bona fide attempt to conduct grassroots lobbying to influence Senator D's vote on the legislation.

4. Tax on Political Activities

A 501(c)(4) may be subject to a tax on expenditures made for political activities. Under IRC section 527(f), the tax is imposed at the highest corporate rate on the lesser of:

- the organization's annual net investment income (income from interest, dividends, rents, and royalties, and the gains from sale or exchange of assets minus the losses for such assets and investment management expenses); or
- the aggregate amount expended on political activities during that year.

A 501(c)(4) is required to report its political expenditures on the Form 990 (see below) and to file an IRS Form 1120-POL if it has $100 or more in both net investment income and political expenditures ("exempt function" expenditures). A 501(c)(4) may pay for certain expenses permitted by the Federal Election Campaign Act and similar state election laws, such as express advocacy communications with "members" and the costs of establishing, administering, and fundraising for a PAC, without incurring a tax.²² These expenditures do, however, count in determining the organization's primary purpose.

A 501(c)(4) organization may minimize or avoid this tax on political campaign expenditures by forming a separate segregated fund—either a PAC or a 527 organization—to conduct political activities. It is important to be aware, however, of the consequences of conducting political activities through a political organization, as described in Chapter III.

A 501(c)(4) is required to report its political expenditures on the Form 990.

5. Reporting Political Activities to the IRS

The IRS Form 990 requires a 501(c) organization to report certain information about its political expenditures. The core form asks whether the reporting organization engaged in "direct or indirect political activities" on behalf of or in opposition to candidates for public office. If the organization engages in independent expenditures, member communications, fundraising, or administrative activities for a separate segregated fund or other exempt function activities, it should respond "yes" to this question and complete Schedule C of the Form 990.

Part I-A, line 1 of the Schedule C requests a description of the "direct and indirect political campaign activities" that the 501(c) undertook in the reporting period. The description should include a brief explanation of the political activities undertaken by the 501(c) only, not those of a separate segregated fund or other PAC. If the 501(c) pays for the administrative and/or fundraising costs of its PAC, that should be mentioned in the description. Line 2 asks for the total amount of money spent by the 501(c) for all of these activities. Line 3 requests the total number of hours that volunteers for the organization expended on political activities. Any reasonable method may be used to estimate these hours. Hours expended on behalf of any related PAC should not be included.

Part I-C asks a series of questions about more limited political activities, only those activities that constitute "exempt function" activity as defined by IRC section 527. The types of expenditures that would be reported on line 1 of this section are independent expenditures and any direct or in-kind contributions made by the 501(c). Expenditures for member communications (see Chapter I, § D(3)), administrative and fundraising costs for a separate segregated fund, and other indirect expenditures would not be reported on this line. Any funds transferred to another political party or political committee that is not a separate segregated fund must be reported on line 2. Finally, the reporting organization must indicate whether it filed a Form 1120-POL and list the name, address, and employer identification number of any political organization to which it made payments, including those "direct and prompt" transfers to its own separate segregated funds. See Chapter 4, § A(4).

D. RULES ON 501(c)(4) PARTICIPATION IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS AFTER CITIZENS UNITED

The Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA) regulates the financing of and participation in federal elections. Therefore, any activity that involves spending in connection with a federal election should be reviewed to ensure that it is permitted under the FECA even if it is permitted under tax law. The FECA has different standards from the Internal Revenue Code for determining what constitutes electoral activity.

FECA has different standards from the Internal Revenue Code for determining what constitutes electoral activity.

In 2010, the Supreme Court struck down governmental restrictions on corporations', including nonprofits', spending general treasury funds for independent public communications that "expressly advocate" the election or defeat of clearly identified federal candidates and those that qualify as "electioneering communications." (See Chapter I, § D(6) below for discussion of electioneering communications.²³) Prior to Citizens United, virtually all corporations were prohibited under federal law from engaging in express advocacy to the general public.²⁴ While corporations could spend funds on independent public communications with election-related messages, they could not engage in express advocacy in these communications. They could also communicate with their bona fide members on any subject including express advocacy. (See Chapter 4, § B(7).) The Citizens United decision permits 501(c)(4)s to make independent expenditures but did not change the limits on political activities imposed by the tax rules. Remember that political activities may not be a 501(c)(4)'s primary purpose and that expenditures for these activities may be subject to taxation under section 527(f).

As of the publication date of this guide, the FEC has not revised its regulations to reflect the changes resulting from Citizens United. The Commission has announced, however, that it will not enforce regulations that are inconsistent with the decision²⁵ and has undertaken a rulemaking to consider how to conform its regulations with Citizens United and other new developments.²⁶ The FEC's failure to revise the regulations to reflect recent court decisions creates uncertainty with respect to some of the activities discussed below. As a consequence, even though the statute and regulations may state otherwise, certain activities are permitted following Citizens United and other decisions. The following sections describe activities in which corporations may engage and the associated reporting requirements.

Note: Without further clarification from the FEC, however, the rules governing some activities are not clear, and the areas of uncertainty are noted as necessary below.

1. Corporate Contributions to Federal Candidates Are Prohibited

Even after Citizens United, the FECA prohibits corporations, including nonprofit corporations,²⁷ from making contributions with general treasury funds²⁸ to support the election or defeat of a federal candidate.²⁹ Contributions include direct and indirect payments (including distributions, loans, advances, deposits, or gifts) of money, services, or anything of value that go to benefit any candidate, political committee, or party organization.³⁰

Under this general rule, a nonprofit corporation such as a 501(c)(4) may not:

- contribute directly to a federal candidate, a Federal PAC, or a political party; or
- make in-kind contributions to a federal candidate, political party, or Federal PAC by providing goods or services at no charge or at less than fair market value, including, but not limited to, mailing, membership, or donor lists; paid staff; travel and living expenses; or radio or television ads that are coordinated with the candidate or candidate's campaign. (For a more detailed discussion of coordination see Chapter I, § F.)

A 501(c)(4) may, however, contribute to a Super PAC. See Chapter V.

2. Independent Expenditures Are Permitted Under Citizens United

After Citizens United, corporations, including 501(c)(4) organizations, may pay for independent expenditures that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a clearly identified federal candidate. These communications include broadcast, cable or satellite communications, outdoor advertising (such as billboards), magazine and newspaper ads, mass mailings, or telephone banks, as well as electronic communications such as emails and websites.³¹

In determining whether a communication is express advocacy, the FEC considers whether:

- a communication uses phrases to urge the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate, such as “vote for,” “defeat,” or “support your Democratic nominee.” Other examples of express advocacy would include such phrases as “vote Obama,” “vote pro-choice” with a list of names or photographs of candidates supporting or opposing choice, or “reject the incumbent”³²; or
- the communication as a whole, considering its proximity to an election, could only be interpreted by a reasonable person as urging the election or defeat of a candidate “because (1) the electoral portion of the communication is unmistakable, unambiguous and suggestive of only one meaning; and (2) reasonable minds could not differ as to whether it encourages actions to elect or defeat one or more clearly identified candidates.”³³

Independent expenditures are not subject to campaign finance limits. However, to be “independent,” the expenditures must be made without any cooperation, consultation, or request from candidates, their authorized committee, or a political party. Cooperation or “coordination” exists when the 501(c)(4) making the independent expenditure or electioneering communication has interacted with the campaign in particular ways. One common way for an expenditure to be impermissibly “coordinated” occurs when an organization airs a television or radio ad at the request or suggestion of a candidate or campaign. Cooperation will also exist if the organization has substantial discussions with the campaign about an expenditure or if the organization informs the campaign about a planned communication related to the campaign and the campaign signals its agreement with the suggestion to make that communication. (See Section H(1) of this chapter for a more detailed discussion of coordination.)

a. Special note: Voter registration and get-out-the-vote activities

Under Citizens United, a corporation may distribute voter registration and get-out-the-vote (GOTV) communications that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a federal candidate, as long as the voter drive is not coordinated with any candidate, campaign, or political party. It is less clear, however, whether corporation is permitted to sponsor a voter registration or GOTV drive that includes express advocacy and provides transportation to the polls. As of the date of this guide’s publication, although the FEC has not resolved whether a voter drive that includes both speech and transportation to the polls or registrar falls outside the ruling in Citizens United, the issue is under consideration.³⁴

Like a 501(c)(3), a 501(c)(4) may also distribute to the general public informational materials about registration and voting that have been produced by official election administrators. These materials include, for example, official registration-by-mail forms and absentee ballots, subject to applicable state law. A 501(c)(4) may also donate funds to state or local government agencies that administer elections to help in offsetting the cost of printing or distributing forms or information on registration or voting.

Note: An organization may not give money or any other benefit to individuals as an incentive or reward for registering to vote or for voting.³⁵ Many states have additional rules governing voter registration and GOTV that should be reviewed prior to conducting any such program.

b. FEC reporting requirements for corporations making independent expenditures

While corporations may make independent expenditures without organizing and registering a PAC, they are required to report³⁶ aggregate independent expenditures over $250 relating to a specific race on FEC Form 5 (“Report of Independent Expenditures Made and Contributions Received”). The report must list any contributor who gave an aggregate amount over $200 specifically for the purpose of furthering the reported independent expenditures.³⁷ Contributions given with specific instructions for use are commonly referred to as “earmarked.” The organization need not list contributors who do not earmark the funds for (or make the contribution “for the purpose of furthering”) independent expenditures. On Form 5, the organization must also list every individual and entity who was paid more than $200 in the aggregate during a calendar year in connection with independent expenditures.³⁸

In addition to the periodic reports, corporations must report within 48 hours of the date of dissemination of the communication whenever total independent expenditures relating to a specific race in an election cycle reach $10,000 in the aggregate.³⁹ Within the final 20 days before an election, the threshold amount drops to $1,000, and the reporting period shortens to 24 hours.⁴⁰ Contracts obligating funds, as well as actual disbursements, must be included in all reports.⁴¹

3. Communications to Members and Restricted Class

A 501(c)(4) is permitted to expressly advocate the election or defeat of clearly identified federal candidates in communications directed to its members, executive and administrative personnel, and their families, and these communications may be coordinated with the candidate or campaign.⁴² “Member communications” remain an important option even after Citizens United for several reasons. Most importantly, member communications may be coordinated with the candidate or political party that is the subject of the communication. In addition, the expenses associated with communications to members are not treated as “contributions” or “expenditures” under federal law and are not subject to the political expenditures tax under IRC section 527.

Under this exception:

- Communications must be strictly limited to bona fide members, executive and administrative personnel, and their families. (See Chapter IV, § C(7) for a more detailed discussion of members and membership organizations.)
- Communications to members may be coordinated with candidates, campaign staff, and political parties.
- Member communications may include phone banks, letters, meetings, publications to members, a members-only website, or any other correspondence that can be directed specifically to individual members. If the communication is circulated beyond the membership, it would be considered a contribution or independent expenditure, depending on whether or not the communication is coordinated with a candidate or political party and a vote in the upcoming election.
- The communications must state the organization’s view and must not simply republish a candidate’s campaign materials.
- Communications to members may expressly advocate the election or defeat of clearly identified candidates. They may also suggest that members register with a particular political party.

For example, endorsements and candidate appearances are frequently conducted as membership communications.

a. Endorsements Coordinated with a Candidate

If a 501(c)(4) wishes to endorse a candidate and coordinate that announcement with the candidate's campaign, the endorsement may be made through a membership-only communication. The endorsement may be coordinated with the candidate and announced in the organization's newsletter or other publication, as long as the distribution is restricted to members and a small number of nonmembers. (See the discussion of candidate appearances and associated press releases below.) There is no clear rule as to what constitutes a "small number" of nonmembers, but the FEC, the agency that enforces the FECA, has reviewed in some specific cases the absolute number of nonmembers receiving the publication as well as the percentage of the total circulation that they represent. For example, the FEC ruled that 13.7 percent (or more) of total circulation to nonmembers is more than a small number.⁴³

Endorsements announced to the general public must comply with the rules governing independent expenditures. (See Chapter 3, § B(2).) Any public announcement through a press conference or any other means, however, may not be coordinated with the candidate or the campaign. Therefore, the endorsed candidate may not appear or be consulted about the event.

Endorsements announced to the general public must comply with the rules governing independent expenditures.

b. Candidate Appearances

A 501(c)(4) organization may also invite a candidate, a candidate's representatives, and political party representatives to address its membership without making an impermissible contribution.⁴⁴ There is no requirement to invite all candidates. The organization may invite only the candidate it supports or favors or the representative of one political party while excluding all others.

The sponsoring organization may announce its support for the candidate or party, and it may urge members to contribute, as long as the organization does not facilitate support by collecting the contributions for that candidate.⁴⁵ The candidate or representative may solicit and accept contributions for the campaign or political party before, during, or after the event.

Media representatives, including newspaper and broadcast reporters, may be invited. Advance information regarding the appearance may be sent to the media through a press release. In addition, a limited number of invited or honored guests other than the organization's membership and the staff required to oversee the meeting may also attend the candidate's appearance. If more than one candidate for the same office (or their representatives) or a party representative addresses the membership, and if the media are invited to one of those individuals' appearances, the organization must allow the media equal access to cover all of the appearances.

If an organization invites its employees, other than administrative and executive personnel and their families, to attend an appearance by a candidate or political party representative, additional restrictions apply.⁴⁶ First, candidates may advocate their election, but the organization, its PAC, and its employees may not. Second, while candidates may solicit funds for their campaigns during an appearance, they may not accept contributions at the event, although they may give the audience campaign materials and preaddressed envelopes for contributions. Third, if the organization receives a request from another candidate seeking the same office, it must make equal time and a similar location available to any candidate who wishes to appear. Finally, if a party representative is permitted to address employees, the organization must give

If the organization is planning to conduct independent expenditures in the future it should not request information on or discuss the candidate's campaign plans, projects, or needs beyond the scope of the appearance.

equal opportunity to representatives of other parties. As with member-only events, the organization must allow the media to cover candidates' appearances on an equal basis.

While the organization may consult the candidate on the structure, format, and timing of the appearance, if the organization is planning to conduct independent expenditures in the future it should not request information on or discuss the candidate's campaign plans, projects, or needs beyond the scope of the appearance. These more extensive discussions may run afoul of the coordination rules discussed in Chapter I, § E.

c. Joint Membership Events

Two or more membership organizations may conduct a joint conference call or meeting of their memberships with a federal candidate and split the costs on an actual or closely approximated pro-rata basis as long as the organizations do not advocate the candidate's election during the event.

The FEC ruled that three incorporated 501(c) organizations could jointly sponsor a series of teleconferences with presidential candidates in which participation was limited to the respective members of the organizations. All candidates could say anything they wished, solicit contributions, and ask participants to volunteer for their campaigns. The FEC conditioned its approval on each organization's paying a pro-rata share of the costs based on the number of its members who participated. In this way, no organization would be subsidizing the costs of candidate appearances to a restricted class other than its own.⁴⁷

d. Reporting Expenditures for Member Communications

A 501(c)(4) must report all direct expenditures made for membership communications that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate if the aggregate costs exceed $2,000 per election for all federal candidates in the election. There is one exception to this rule: the costs of communications primarily devoted to subjects other than express advocacy do not have to be reported. (See Example 4 below.)

Quarterly and pre-general election reports (using FEC Form 7, "Report of Communication Costs by Corporations and Membership Organizations") are filed with the FEC during election years. Costs are aggregated for each election; consequently, there is a separate limit for all primary, general, and special elections. The report requires an organization to identify the candidate(s) that the communication benefited or opposed. If a communication identifies more than one candidate, the total costs may be allocated among the candidates based on the space or time devoted to each candidate relative to the overall communication.

Example:

PEN, a 501(c)(4), spends $50,000 to write, publish, and distribute a mailing sent only to its members, urging them to reelect the President and touting his strong environmental record and the promises he has made to continue making progress in his second term. PEN must report the cost of the mailer on FEC Form 7, identifying the dates of the communication, the type of communication, the candidate supported, and the cost of the communication.

Example:

PEN spends $50,000 to write, publish, and distribute a mailing sent only to its members. Half of each mail piece is dedicated to supporting the President's reelection; the other half of each mailer focuses on urging members to vote for the pro-environment candidate in their district. PEN publishes five different versions of this mailer, targeted at five congressional districts. The mailer is allocable between the President and the five congressional candidates. PEN must file FEC Form 7. In doing so PEN should report $25,000 spent to support the President and $5,000 for each of the five congressional candidates.

Example:

PEN has a newsletter that is distributed widely to members and the general public. PEN lists candidates across the country whom PEN endorses as "pro-environment." PEN has not coordinated with any candidate or candidate's committee in preparing or distributing the newsletter. PEN is permitted to send these communications, and the costs of the newsletter may be allocated between membership communications and independent expenditures.

Example:

PEN publishes a monthly magazine for its members on environmental issues and related topics. The October issue also carries an article about endorsements of candidate for Congress and President. The costs associated with the endorsement article do not have to be reported because the publication is primarily devoted to other topics.

4. Events with Candidates Targeted at the General Public

Even after the Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United, corporations are prohibited from engaging in express advocacy of candidates to the general public unless the communication is independent of the candidate, campaign, and political party. Therefore, certain election-related activities targeted toward the general public continue to raise issues because they involve a degree of coordination with candidates, their campaigns, or a political party. Because the FEC has not revised its regulations after Citizens United, and as the regulations have not yet been challenged directly, it remains unclear to what extent these rules continue to apply.

a. Candidate Debates

The FEC's regulations provide that a 501(c)(4) may conduct federal candidate debates that are open to the public, but only if the organization does not endorse, support, or oppose any candidate or political party.⁴⁸ A corporation or labor union may donate funds to support a debate conducted by the 501(c)(4) organization.

At least two candidates must be included in the scheduled debate.⁴⁹ The candidates must meet face to face; they may not be scheduled to speak at separate appearances.⁵⁰ If circumstances beyond the organization's control arise, such as bad weather preventing one candidate from showing up, the organization is not required to cancel the debate.⁵¹

The debate may not be designed or conducted to favor one candidate over another. The sponsoring organization must use pre-established, objective criteria for selecting candidates to participate if there are too many to accommodate at a single debate. Written criteria should be presented to the candidates. The sponsoring organization may not express support for or opposition to or solicit funds for any candidate or political party at, or in conjunction with, the debate.

b. Non-Electoral Appearances by Officeholders

A 501(c)(4) may also sponsor events for the general public at which one or more officeholders appear, even if those appearing are also candidates, as long as the appearance is not campaign-related.⁵² The rules on candidate debates do not apply to these events. It must be clear that, although the speakers are candidates for office, they are appearing in their capacity as officeholders (or in some other non-candidate role). The 501(c)(4) should make reasonable efforts to have speakers address issues, not campaign activities or rhetoric. Neither the organization nor the candidate may advocate the election or defeat of any candidate or raise funds for a candidate or party. There is no requirement, in this case, to offer other candidates the opportunity to speak. References to the speaker's campaign or to the campaign or the qualifications of other candidates in the same race could cause the appearance to be considered campaign-related.

5. Use of 501(c)(4) Facilities, Resources, and Staff

A 501(c)(4) may allow a federal candidate, political party, or political committee to use its meeting rooms on the same terms on which they are customarily made available to clubs or to civic or community organizations.⁵³ In this case, however, the 501(c)(4) is required to make the room available to any other candidate on the same terms. A 501(c)(4) may rent or sell its membership lists to a campaign or political committee at fair market value or may exchange its lists for a list of approximately the same value. The candidate or political committee must pay for the use of these resources in advance.

a. Volunteer Activities

Members, staff, and directors of a 501(c)(4) may volunteer to support and work for federal candidates, as long as the work is on their own time and in an individual capacity. However, they may only make “occasional, isolated, or incidental use” of the organization's facilities for these volunteer activities. “Occasional, isolated, or incidental” generally means that the individual's use during working hours does not prevent employees from completing their normal amount of work.⁵⁴ Employees may, for example, use office phones to organize members to volunteer for a campaign on an “incidental” basis. The regulations provide a “safe harbor” for activity that does not exceed one hour per week or four hours per month. Thus, individuals are permitted, during or outside working hours, to use corporate or union facilities to work on behalf of a federal candidate whom they support as long as:

- the corporation does not make the availability of the equipment conditional on its use for political activity or in support of or opposition to any particular candidate or political party; and
- the individual reimburses the corporation to the extent that the overhead or operating costs of the corporation are increased. The reimbursement is an in-kind contribution by the volunteer to the candidate who benefits from the volunteer work.⁵⁵

b. Exemption for Use of Computer Equipment

The FEC regulations provide an additional exemption for individual volunteer activity conducted on the Internet using an employer's computer equipment. An individual's activity will be treated as "occasional, isolated, or incidental," even if it is in excess of one hour a week or four hours per month, as long as:

- the employee completes the normal amount of ordinarily expected work;
- the use does not increase the overhead or operating costs of the corporation; and
- the activity is not performed under coercion by the employer.

c. Corporate-Sponsored Activities

The rules for volunteer activities do not apply to corporate-sponsored activities, such as those conducted by senior management to further the interests of their employing organization. The rules require that this use of corporate resources must be paid for in advance by a Federal PAC, the employees (within their lawful contribution limit), or the campaign of the candidate benefiting from the activity. All advance payments must be at full fair market value.

For Federal PACs that frequently use the facilities or staff of a connected corporation, it is often simpler to have the PAC advance lump sums to the corporation and draw down these funds as necessary. For example, frequently organizations want to send staff to work on specific campaigns for candidates whom they have endorsed. Providing these services is an in-kind contribution to the candidate's campaign. The Federal PAC must make a payment to the corporation that employs the staff in advance for salary, benefits, and any other associated costs. The Federal PAC may advance a lump sum to the corporation, and the corporation may draw from that payment to cover the amount of the salary and benefits that the employees earn. Similarly, if the Federal PAC wants to use a meeting room in the corporate facilities to host a fundraiser for a federal candidate, the PAC must pay fair market value in advance of the event for the use of that room.

Electioneering communications are targeted broadcast ads (TV, radio, cable, and satellite) aired within 30 days of a primary or 60 days of a general election that mentions the name of a federal candidate.

6. Electioneering Communications

a. Basic Rules

Corporations may air certain broadcast communications known as "electioneering communications."⁵⁶ Electioneering communications are targeted⁵⁷ broadcast ads (TV, radio, cable, and satellite) aired within 30 days of a primary or 60 days of a general election that mentions the name of a federal candidate. Although the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 (BCRA) prohibited corporations and unions from using general treasury funds for "electioneering communications," the Supreme Court in FEC v. Wisconsin Right to Life ruled that the blackout period was unconstitutional unless an ad had the "functional equivalent" of express advocacy, "susceptible of no reasonable interpretation other than as an appeal to vote for or against a specific candidate."⁵⁸ Subsequently, the Court ruled in Citizens United that a corporation may engage in electioneering communications including those that are the functional equivalent of express advocacy. Therefore, electioneering communications are no longer restricted in any manner—corporations and unions may engage in electioneering communications—but are subject to reporting requirements.⁵⁹

b. Reporting Electioneering Communications

If the corporation spends an aggregate of $10,000 to produce and air electioneering communications, the group must report those expenditures on FEC Form 9 ("24-Hour

Notice of Disbursements/Obligations for Electioneering Communications”) within 24 hours of when the advertisement first airs.⁶⁰ Each additional time that the nonprofit aggregates another $10,000 in electioneering communications spending during a calendar year, it must file another report within 24 hours. Unlike the 48-hour reports for independent expenditures (see above), the $10,000 threshold for electioneering communications is triggered by the aggregate of spending on all electioneering communications for all elections and candidates within a calendar year; it is not based on spending for each candidate and election separately.

The group must report the amount of each disbursement or amount obligated of more than $200 to produce or air the ad during the period covered. In addition to reporting the money that it spent on the ads, a corporation whose expenditures trigger 24-hour reporting for electioneering communications is required to report the names and addresses of certain donors. At the time of publication, the requirements for reporting donors to the organization is the subject of ongoing litigation. Currently, an organization must disclose each of its donors who contributed an aggregate of $1,000 or more since January 1 of the preceding calendar year for the purpose of furthering electioneering communication. If the organization instead sets up a separate account to make electioneering communications, it must disclose only the donors to that account who contributed more than $1,000 since January 1 of the previous year. Given the uncertainty surrounding this disclosure issue, however, before engaging in electioneering communications it is advisable to check the current status of the FEC’s regulations.⁶¹

7. Disclaimers for Independent Expenditures and Electioneering Communications

All public communications paid for by 501(c)(4) organizations that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a clearly identified federal candidate, as well as all electioneering communications, must carry a disclaimer stating who paid for and authorized the communication.⁶² A public communication includes any communication by means of broadcast, cable, or satellite; newspaper or magazine ad; billboard or mass mailing; phone bank to the general public; or other form of general public political advertising. General public political advertising does not include communications over the Internet other than communications placed for a fee (such as pop-up and other types of ads) on another person’s website.⁶³ Some groups choose to include a disclaimer on Internet communications that are independent expenditures, even though this notice is not required unless the communications are paid for by a federal political committee. See Chapter III, § F(3) regarding disclaimers for other entities, PACs, and electioneering communications.

A “membership communication” sent by a membership organization to its members does not require a disclaimer. In addition, there is an exception for communications placed on “[b]umper stickers, pins, buttons, pens, and similar small items upon which the disclaimer cannot be conveniently printed.”⁶⁴ Nor are disclaimers required for “[s]kywriting, water towers, wearing apparel, or other means of displaying an advertisement of such a nature that the inclusion of a disclaimer would be impracticable.”

The disclaimers must state the corporation’s full name and permanent street address, telephone number, or Web address, and the fact that the communication is not authorized by any candidate or campaign.

Disclaimers must be “clear and conspicuous” in order to give the viewer, listener, or reader adequate notice of the entity paying for and authorizing the communication. The disclaimer must not be difficult to read or hear, or presented in such a way that it could be easily overlooked. In a written communication, it must be contained in a box, printed with reasonable contrast, and set apart from the rest of the communication. A disclaimer in 12-point font size satisfies the requirement when used in materials (such as signs, posters, and newspapers) that are no larger than two by three feet.

Example:

“Paid for by Protect the Environment Now, www.pen.org [or street address or phone number], and not authorized by any candidate or candidate’s committee.”

Phone banks. Live caller phone banks to the general public—defined as more than 500 substantially similar phone calls within a 30-day period to individuals other than a group’s members⁶⁵—must include a disclaimer. The caller must identify the name of the entity paying for the call and whether or not the call is authorized by a candidate. To be clear and conspicuous, it must be delivered in a manner that is not hard to hear (either because it is not audible or because it is stated too quickly). It is not clear whether a caller needs to state the complete disclaimer at the beginning of the phone call or whether it is acceptable to provide some of the information at the end of the conversation. (See below for special rules governing robocalls.)

Example:

“This call is paid for by Protect the Environment Now and is not authorized by any candidate or candidate’s committee. You can learn more about PEN at our website, www.pen.org.”

Broadcast communications. In addition to the general disclaimer discussed above, broadcast communications require a disclaimer stating the full name of the corporation responsible for the communication.⁶⁶ If the communication is broadcast on the radio, the statement must be spoken clearly. If the communication is transmitted on television, cable, or satellite, the statement must be accompanied by a voiceover stating the information, and the disclaimer must appear in writing at the end of the communication in a clearly readable manner, with a reasonable degree of color contrast to the background; it must be shown for a period of four seconds.

Example:

“Paid for by Protect the Environment Now, www.pen.org [or street address or phone number] and not authorized by any candidate or candidate’s committee. PEN is responsible for the content of this advertisement.”

8. Special Rules for Robocalls

Although some aspects of federal law governing robocalls do not apply to political calls (e.g., limitations on permissible hours, Do Not Call list, and opt-out policy), all robocalls are required by federal law to include the following disclaimers: the call must (1) “at the beginning of the message, state clearly the identity of the business, individual, or other entity initiating the call,” and (2) “during or after the message, state clearly the telephone number or address of such business, individual, or other entity initiating the call.”⁶⁷ The Federal Communications Commission’s regulations implementing this statute do not require specific language to meet these requirements. However, the regulations specify that the telephone

A 501(c)(4) corporation in coordinated communications with the general public.

number provided for disclaimer purposes may not be that of the autodialer or prerecorded message player that placed the call.⁶⁸

Many states also have disclaimer requirements for robocalls that go beyond those imposed by federal law. Note that in recent years some states have enacted substantive restrictions on robocalls and have even prohibited robocalls altogether. It is therefore important to review both federal and state rules before engaging in this activity.

E. COORDINATION AND INDEPENDENT ACTIVITIES

Expenditures made in concert or cooperation with a candidate or political party are treated as in-kind contributions subject to the prohibitions and limitations of the FECA.⁶⁹ Specifically, a 501(c)(4) corporation may not engage in coordinated communications with the general public. FEC regulations set out a three-part test to determine if a particular communication is “coordinated.”⁷⁰ Satisfaction of all three of the specific elements of the test “justifies the conclusion that payments for the coordinated communication are for the purpose of influencing a Federal election.” The three elements are payment, content standard, and conduct standard.

1. Payment

The communication is paid for, in whole or in part, by someone other than a candidate, a candidate’s authorized committee, or the candidate’s agents, or a political party or its agents. The definition of “agent” includes any person who has actual authority, express or implied, to engage in specific activities (listed in the rules) on behalf of a principal.⁷¹

2. Content Standard

In order to limit the rules to communications whose subject matter is reasonably related to an election, the communication must be one of the following:

- a “public communication” that expressly advocates the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate;
- a communication that satisfies the definition of an electioneering communication as defined by the statute;
- a “public communication” that includes, in whole or in part, campaign materials prepared by a candidate, the candidate’s authorized committee, or any agent of either the candidate or his authorized committee;
- a “public communication” that is the functional equivalent of express advocacy (A communication is considered to be the functional equivalent of express advocacy if it is “susceptible of no reasonable interpretation other than as an appeal to vote for or against a clearly identified federal candidate.” The FEC has considered the functional equivalent of express advocacy to be broader than express advocacy and looked to the Supreme Court’s application of the test in decisions including FEC v. Wisconsin Right to Life.);
- a “public communication” that satisfies each of the following:
 - » refers to a political party or a clearly identified federal candidate (including a reference made to a candidate through the “popular name” of a bill or law);
 - » is publically distributed within defined time periods: in the case of a political party or presidential candidate, 120 days before a general, special, or runoff election or a primary, convention, or caucus to nominate a candidate; in the case of a U.S. House or Senate candidate, 90 days before the same events; and
 - » is directed to voters in the jurisdiction of the clearly identified candidate or to voters in a jurisdiction in which one or more candidates of the political party appears on the ballot.

For each of these types of communications under the content standard, a “public communication” is a “communication by means of any broadcast, cable, or satellite communication, newspaper, magazine, outdoor advertising facility, mass mailing or telephone bank to the general public, or any other form of general public political advertising.” “Public communications” do not cover the Internet and other electronic communications (including email), other than ads placed for a fee on another person’s website, private correspondence, or internal communications between a corporation or labor organization and its restricted class.

3. Conduct Standard

The rules enumerate different types of conduct, any of which may satisfy this test, *whether or not there is agreement or formal collaboration*⁷²:

Request or suggestion. A communication that is created, produced, or distributed at the request or suggestion of a candidate or authorized committee or political party or agent of any of these entities. This standard also covers the situation where the entity paying for the communication makes the suggestion, and the candidate, authorized committee, or political party committee assents to the suggestion.

Material involvement. A candidate, authorized committee, political party, or agent is materially involved in the decisions regarding the content, intended audience, the means and mode of the communication, specific media outlet used for, timing and frequency, or size and prominence of a printed communication or duration of a broadcast, cable, or satellite communication.

Substantial discussion. A communication is produced, created, or distributed after substantial discussion about the communication between the person paying for the communication (or their employees or agents) and the candidate identified in the communication, his authorized committee, his opponent’s authorized committee, a political party, or agents of any of these individuals or entities. The discussion is “substantial” if the information conveyed to the person paying for the communication is material to the creation, production, or distribution of the communication. In addition, this rule does not apply when the “material” information was obtained from a publically available source.

Common vendor. The communication is created or distributed by an organization with the assistance of a vendor who has provided certain types of services to a candidate, her authorized committee, her opponent’s committee, a political party, or an agent of any of these entities within the previous 120 days. A candidate and an entity sponsoring a communication could share the same vendor, however, if the vendor does not use material information about the campaign or convey material information about the campaign to the entity. (See the discussion of safe harbors below.)

Former employees. The communication is created and distributed with the assistance of an employee or independent contractor of a candidate, authorized committee, or political party committee within the previous 120 days. The former employee or contractor must use or convey to the entity making the communication information about the identified candidate’s (or opponents’) plans, projects, or activities, and that information must be material to the creation, production, or distribution of the communication.

4. Safe Harbors

Policy discussions. A candidate’s or political party committee’s response to an inquiry about a candidate’s or party’s positions on legislative or policy issues that does not include a discussion of campaign plans, projects, or needs does not satisfy the conduct standards. This provision is intended to permit organizations to make inquiries about a candidate’s views on policy issues or legislation in the context, for example, of preparing a voter guide or a lobbying campaign.

Some states permit corporations, including nonprofit corporations, to make contributions to state and local candidates and committees.

Firewall. The regulations expressly provide that, absent other factors, there is no coordination if the commercial vendor, former employee, or organization establishes and implements a “firewall” that prohibits candidate and political party information material to a communication from passing to individuals who are creating, producing, or distributing a communication subject to the coordination rules. The firewall must be described in a written policy that is distributed at the time of implementation to all relevant employees, consultants, and clients who are affected by the policy. If, however, there is specific information that is material to the creation, production, or distribution of the communication used by or conveyed to the person paying for the communication, the firewall will not provide a defense.

F. RULES ON POLITICAL ACTIVITY BY UNINCORPORATED ASSOCIATIONS UNDER THE FECA

Under the FECA, unincorporated associations, including unincorporated 501(c)(4)s, are considered “persons” and are treated as individuals for purposes of contribution limits (with the exception that the $117,000 aggregate two-year limit on contributions by individuals does not apply). If the association’s major purpose is campaign-related activity, it must register as a federal political committee, which is subject to all the FECA registration and reporting requirements and limits on contributions and the solicitation of funds.

G. RULES ON POLITICAL ACTIVITY IN STATE AND LOCAL ELECTIONS

A 501(c)(4) seeking to influence nonfederal elections may also be subject to regulation and reporting obligations under state and local law for political activity. Some states permit corporations, including nonprofit corporations, to make contributions to state and local candidates and committees. Following the Supreme Court’s ruling in Citizens United, corporations are permitted to make independent expenditures in connection with state and local elections. Most states have either enacted laws governing the disclosure of independent expenditures or are in the process of revising their campaign finance disclosure laws. Before conducting any political activities, including raising or spending funds, for the purpose of influencing state or local elections in a particular state, it is advisable to seek the advice of counsel. Note that the Internal Revenue Code limitations on political activity by 501(c)(4)s applies to all federal, state, and local electoral activities, as does the possibility of tax on political activities under IRC section 527.

The examples are equally applicable to 501(c)(4) organizations).
- ²² Treas. Reg. § 1.527-6(b)(3).
- ²³ At issue in the case was the attempt by Citizens United, a 501(c)(4) organization, to make its documentary film Hillary: The Movie, already screened in public theaters, available for home consumption through a video-on-demand provider via cable and satellite television technology. Citizens United also wanted to promote the film in television advertisements. Unlike theatrical and Internet distribution, the proposed televising of the film and the ads implicated the electioneering communications provisions of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act (BCRA), which prohibit corporate (and union) expenditures for certain broadcast communications that “refer” to a federal candidate and run within 30 days of a primary or 60 days of a general election. The majority found that the film was the “functional equivalent of express advocacy” because there was “no reasonable interpretation” other than that it was an appeal to vote against Hillary Clinton for the office of President. Accordingly, BCRA prohibited the televising of the film.

²⁴ Prior to the Supreme Court's decision in Citizens United, only a "qualified nonprofit corporation" (QNC) was permitted to make independent expenditures and electioneering communications that were the "functional equivalent" of express advocacy using corporate treasury funds. Under the regulations, an incorporated 501(c)(4) that meets the following stringent criteria may be treated as a QNC: (1) it may not engage in any business activities. Business activities include income-producing activities such as the provision of goods or services, advertising, or promotional activity. They do not include fundraising activities for contributions and membership dues; (2) it may not have shareholders or other persons, other than employees or creditors, who are affiliated with the organization in a way that would allow them to make a claim on the organization's assets or earnings or offered or receive any benefit that creates a disincentive for them to disassociate themselves from the corporation; and (3) it may not be established by or accept contributions from any business corporation or labor organization. The 501(c)(4) must be able to show that it has received no direct or indirect donations from these sources as demonstrated by accounting records or, if that is not possible, a written policy against accepting these donations.

This rule for independent expenditures by QNCs was an exception to the general FECA prohibition of the use of corporate funds to influence the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate. In light of the decision in Citizens United, QNC status has little or no significance because all corporations may now conduct independent expenditures.

²⁷ In most cases, this guide assumes that 501(c)(4)s have chosen to incorporate rather than exist as unincorporated associations. Although it is possible to become a 501(c)(4) without incorporating, 501(c)(4)s that expect to work with 501(c)(3)s may be better off incorporating, because doing so helps to establish the legal separation between the organizations required by federal tax law. ⁶⁸ 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(b)(2). Note, also, that the regulations do not mention providing a caller’s address. According to the regulations, only the caller’s phone number is sufficient for the disclaimer, despite the clear statutory language that an address satisfies the legal requirement. Compare 47 U.S.C. § 227(d)(3)(A)(ii) (“during or after the message, state clearly the telephone number or address of such business”) with 47 C.F.R. § 64.1200(b)(2) (“during or after the message state clearly the telephone number (other than that of the autodialer or prerecorded message player that placed the call) of such business”).

⁶⁹ BCRA provides that the FEC’s regulations “shall not require agreement or formal collaboration to establish coordination” and that the FEC must address in its rulemaking (though not necessarily promulgate rules on) four issues: (1) payments for the republication of campaign materials, (2) payments for the use of a common vendor, (3) payments for communications directed or made by persons who previously served as an employee of a candidate or a political party, and (4) payments for communications made by a person after substantial discussion about the communication with a candidate or a political party. CHAPTER II: ESTABLISHING AND OPERATING AFFILIATED 501(C)(3) AND 501(C)(4) ORGANIZATIONS

Given the ability of 501(c)(4)s to engage in extensive lobbying and some political activities, a 501(c)(3) active on public policy issues might consider establishing an affiliated 501(c)(4). This section will explain how to establish a 501(c)(4) and how to manage the allocation of resources between a 501(c)(3) and a 501(c)(4). The guidelines are also applicable to a 501(c)(4) that wishes to establish a 501(c)(3) in order to conduct research and other charitable activities.

A. ESTABLISHING AND OPERATING A 501(C)(4)

In Regan v. Taxation with Representation,¹ the Supreme Court ruled that a 501(c)(3) organization may establish a separate 501(c)(4) to expand its capacity to lobby beyond the limited expenditures allowed for 501(c)(3)s. While it may not be worthwhile to set up a separate organization for a one-time lobbying campaign, there are clear advantages to creating a 501(c)(4) for longer-term lobbying efforts. Unlike a 501(c)(3), a 501(c)(4) may engage in unlimited lobbying on ballot measures and in legislative bodies without jeopardizing its exempt status. And, as noted above, a 501(c)(4) may conduct limited partisan election-related activities and may set up a connected political organization. Many organizations manage multiple related entities—even a 501(c)(3), a 501(c)(4), and 527 organizations—successfully. The key is that the 501(c)(3) must be able to demonstrate that it is not subsidizing, directly or indirectly, the political work of its affiliated 501(c)(4) or related political organizations.

This section discusses the considerations and steps that are advisable when one is establishing an affiliated 501(c)(4). The considerations vary depending on whether the 501(c)(4) only conducts lobbying or also engages in political activities.

1. Corporate Structure, Board of Directors, and Officers

The 501(c)(3) board of directors may wish to pass a resolution authorizing certain individuals to establish a 501(c)(4), or a group of individuals associated with the 501(c)(3) may proceed without a board resolution. In either case, a 501(c)(4) must be established as a legal entity separate from the 501(c)(3). This separation is generally accomplished by incorporating the 501(c)(4). Incorporation provides numerous other advantages, such as limiting directors' and officers' liability for the organization's actions. Incorporating an organization under state law is generally simple. Information, forms, and instructions are available in most states through the Secretary of State's office.² A listing of these offices is available from the National Association of Secretaries of State at <http://www.nass.org/busreg/corpreg.html>. An example

Checklist for Setting Up a 501(c)(4) Social Welfare Organization

(Get a knowledgeable lawyer to help with these steps.)

- Identify the intended purposes. Do they satisfy 501(c)(4) requirements? (See the Introduction to this guide for discussion of each type of tax exemption.)
- Decide whether to incorporate the organization or organize it as an unincorporated association under state law. A 501(c)(4) may be organized as a trust, an unincorporated association, or a corporation. Contact the Secretary of State for procedures on incorporation or on establishing a nonprofit association if that structure is available in your state.
- Apply for an Employer Identification Number (EIN) using IRS Form SS-4, "Application for Employer Identification Number."
- Prepare bylaws. Many companies sell standard bylaws for use by lawyers or non-lawyers, and some states have sample bylaws on the Secretary of State's website. See BolderAdvocacy.org for an example of bylaws for a 501(c)(4).
- Hold an organizational board meeting to elect officers, adopt bylaws, and authorize officers and employees to open bank accounts and sign contracts.
- Establish a bank account.
- Research and follow other requirements in state law regarding corporate and tax compliance.
- Identify an accountant, counsel, or other person to maintain records and ensure corporate compliance, including filing an annual information return on IRS Form 990, "Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax."
- For a 501(c)(4), file IRS Form 1024, "Application for Recognition of Exemption Under section 501(a)." See BolderAdvocacy.org for a sample Form 1024. While a 501(c)(4) organization is not required to file a Form 1024, by filing the application the organization may get formal recognition of tax-exempt status from the IRS.
- File any required applications for tax-exempt status under state law.
- If the (c)(4) is affiliated with a (c)(3), prepare a cost-sharing or allocation agreement. See Appendix B.

of articles of incorporation, bylaws, and the Form 1024 (the application for tax-exempt status) is provided on Alliance for Justice's website, BolderAdvocacy.org.

The 501(c)(4) should have a board of directors separate from that of the 501(c)(3). The boards must operate separately, holding distinct meetings and maintaining separate minutes of their meetings. When the need arises, the members of one board may attend the meetings of the other board as guests, except when a board is meeting in executive session.

Example:

PEN holds its meetings in the morning on the first day of every other month. Minutes are recorded for the 501(c)(4) meeting. That meeting is adjourned, and those individuals who serve as directors of the PEN Education Fund start their meeting to discuss Fund business. Minutes of the second meeting are recorded separately for the 501(c)(3).

If the 501(c)(4) conducts lobbying activities but does not engage in political activities, little risk exists in allowing the same individuals to serve on the boards of both the 501(c)(3) and the 501(c)(4). If, however, the 501(c)(4) conducts political activities, greater corporate separation is advisable between the 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) to reduce the chance that the political activities of the 501(c)(4) will be attributed to the 501(c)(3) or taint the nonpartisan election activities of the 501(c)(3). Separation of the boards is one factor in demonstrating independence. Therefore, it is especially advisable in this situation to have some members of the 501(c)(3) board who are not on the 501(c)(4) board if the 501(c)(4) plans to engage in political activity.

The 501(c)(4) board must elect its own officers and must govern the 501(c)(4) as a separate entity in every respect. Each organization must file its own separate tax returns, comply with all federal and state reporting requirements, and make its own decisions about its conduct. The 501(c)(4) must pay its own costs, and the 501(c)(4)'s board of directors, officers, and staff must make the organization's decisions.

Certain relationships, shared staff, and grants between the 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) must be disclosed on both organizations' Form 990 informational returns. IRS Form 990 is the information return that most 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations must file annually with the IRS to disclose financial and program activity.³ No adverse consequences exist in reporting such an overlap provided that the organizations operate independently and observe legal limits.

In addition, IRS Form 990, Schedule A requires 501(c)(3)s to disclose direct and indirect financial transactions with other exempt organizations, including 501(c)(4)s and, in turn, their connected Federal PACs. The primary purpose of this disclosure is to permit monitoring of the allocation of expenses between related organizations.

The two organizations must maintain separate books, records, and bank accounts, and any transfers between the organizations must be documented. (See Sections B and C of this chapter for more information regarding grants and other transfers of funds between a 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4).)

2. Naming the New Organization

Affiliated 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s often have similar names and logos. To demonstrate, the name of the hypothetical 501(c)(3) Protect the Environment Now Education Fund is quite similar to that of Protect the Environment Now, the 501(c)(4) organization. While the two organizations may have similar names, they should be distinguishable. If the organizations are commonly known by acronyms, the letters should not be identical. Too much similarity could cause confusion about the two organizations' fundraising, lobbying, political, and other activities. If the 501(c)(3) owns the name, it may be advisable to have a licensing agreement with the 501(c)(4) setting out the terms and conditions for use of the name. In fact, this approach may be useful regardless of which entity owns the name and logo, as a way for the original organization to manage the risk that an affiliated organization's board of directors might revise that entity's programmatic focus or mission.

3. Shared Employees, Office Space, and Equipment

A 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) may share employees, equipment, and office space. In fact, the entire staff of the 501(c)(4) could be employees of the 501(c)(3), or vice versa. It is essential, however, that the 501(c)(4) pay at least its full share of all salary, equipment costs, and rent for running the day-to-day operations of the 501(c)(4) in order to ensure that the 501(c)(3) does not subsidize the 501(c)(4).⁴ It is also important to put this cost-sharing arrangement in writing and to comply with the terms of the agreement. (See Appendix B for an example of a cost-sharing agreement.)

These costs should be paid regularly and within a reasonable time. While there is no clear IRS guidance on what is reasonable, a 501(c)(4) should reimburse a 501(c)(3), generally within 30 to 60 days, for any advanced costs, such as salaries or rent. (To provide financial support for a longer period, a 501(c)(3) may make commercially reasonable loans to a 501(c)(4) under certain circumstances as described below in Section C of this chapter.)

To protect the 501(c)(3), the 501(c)(4) should err on the side of overpaying its share of the costs when there is any question as to how an expense should be allocated. The flow of funds from a 501(c)(4) to a 501(c)(3) does not result in any significant legal risk, but a 501(c)(3) could jeopardize its tax-exempt status if it subsidizes or pays the expenses of the 501(c)(4). The exception to this rule is that the 501(c)(3) may support charitable activities of the 501(c)(4), subject to a proper grant agreement, as discussed below.

A 501(c)(4) should reimburse a 501(c)(3), generally within 30 to 60 days, for any advanced costs.

a. Shared Employees

If the two organizations share staff, these employees should keep written records to document the time spent working for each organization so that each organization can pay its share of staff compensation. Completing time records is the best way to support the allocation of salary between the two organizations. If some staff consistently work a certain percentage of time for each organization and that percentage is documented, it may be possible to allocate salary according to that percentage on a continuing basis without continuing to maintain time records. For those staff members who work on projects that frequently change, time sheets should be used for an indefinite period to document any changes in salary allocation.

A 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) may generally arrange to have one organization perform the administrative functions and handle payroll as a payroll agent so long as the other organization reimburses the associated costs in a timely manner. One of the major advantages of this arrangement is that employees do not receive multiple paychecks.

Under certain limited circumstances, organizations that share employees may take advantage of the "common paymaster" rules. A major advantage of these rules is that the FICA tax costs, particularly for highly compensated employees, will not be duplicated if the employees work directly for two or more employers. Under these rules, one entity is designated to pay certain employees even though some of their time may be spent performing services for other related organizations. The common paymaster is responsible for maintaining the payroll records for these employees and may pay individuals with one paycheck or with separate paychecks. A common paymaster also has responsibility for (1) payroll taxes to the government, computed as though the common paymaster were the sole employer, and (2) issuing the required forms, such as Form W-2.

The entities sharing a common paymaster must be “related.” In this case the term “related” has a different definition from that used for determining relatedness for purposes of the Form 990 discussed above. In the case of a tax-exempt organization, one or more of the following tests must be met: (1) at least 30 percent of the employees of one corporation are concurrently employed by the other corporation, (2) at least 50 percent of the officers of one corporation are officers of the other corporation, or (3) at least 50 percent of the board of directors of one corporation also serve on the board of the other corporation. In addition, organizations may operate under these rules only if employees are shared with the common paymaster organization. An organization may not serve as a common paymaster for employees who do no work for that organization. All payments made to employees must be through a single legal entity. Finally, the organizations must designate the common paymaster in writing.⁵ While the designation need not be filed with the IRS, it must be maintained with the accounting records.

As an alternative to reimbursement, each organization may pay its share of an employee’s salary and benefits separately, with each employee receiving two paychecks. This system may be more burdensome and costly because each organization must prepare separate checks or payments, and, as discussed above, it may involve higher payroll taxes.

Example:

The Education Fund and PEN are related and share employees on a regular basis. The Executive Director of the Education Fund typically spends 75 percent of her time on the Education Fund and 25 percent on PEN activities. The Field Director typically works 70 percent of his time for the Education Fund and 30 percent for PEN. These allocations are based on time reports maintained by the employees. Both employees are paid their full salary by the Education Fund. PEN reimburses or advances the funds to the Education Fund to cover the salary and benefits attributable to the time that each employee spends working for PEN. PEN and the Education Fund establish and adhere to a written agreement to document the allocation methods and payments.

Supplying program staff with a standard timesheet may help them to keep track of how they have split their time among 501(c)(3), 501(c)(4), and other activities. This step will also streamline an organization’s administrative compliance efforts. The sample timesheet provided below may be adapted to match the entities affiliated with an organization and activities generally undertaken by staff.

If the 501(c)(4) conducts political activities or has a PAC or 527, the need for timekeeping for shared employees is even more critical. Two principal issues are presented: (1) the organizations must maintain sufficient records to demonstrate that the 501(c)(3) is not financing prohibited political work, and (2) the 501(c)(3) may not directly or indirectly support the political work of the 501(c)(4), PAC, or 527. Sharing staff increases the burden of demonstrating to the IRS that there is no direct or indirect support.

The costs of support staff may be allocated on a “reasonable basis.” While the IRS provides little specific guidance for allocation of support staff, it is clear that there must be a well-documented, specific, and reasonable allocation of expenses. The goal is to split the costs according to use by each organization. For example, the wages of a receptionist who answers phones for both organizations may be allocated based on the number of lines for professional staff or calls answered for each organization, time records maintained for a representative trial period, an allocation ratio based on overhead and administrative expenses, or some other rational measure.

b. Employee Benefits

As described above, it is frequently advantageous to have all employees working for one organization with the related entity reimbursing that organization for its prorated share of the employees’ salaries and benefits. In this case, health insurance and other employee benefits may generally be offered by the employing organization, and these costs would be calculated into the payments from the related organization. In order to ensure that the employees qualify for these benefits, however, it is important to review the plan documents establishing the benefits to confirm that they cover all employees, including shared employees.

Both 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s may establish retirement plans enabling their employees to defer income for tax purposes. While it may be possible for two organizations to share a retirement plan, again it is essential to review the proposed plan to ensure that shared employees are covered and meet the qualifications (especially minimum hour requirements) under the plan document.

c. Office Space and Equipment

A 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) may also share office space and equipment. Again, the 501(c)(4) must pay its full share of the expenses, which should be carefully documented. The 501(c)(4) may sublease office space from the 501(c)(3) or pay its share of the rent separately to the landlord. Alternatively, the 501(c)(4) may pay the rent for both organizations and allow the 501(c)(3) to occupy the space rent-free.

The 501(c)(4) could pay for all of the costs, but the 501(c)(3) may not subsidize the costs of the 501(c)(4).

Each organization's share of the office and equipment must be calculated on a reasonable basis and documented. The IRS provides no specific guidance on allocating costs, but possible measures include assigning each organization a percentage of the cost equal to its share of staff time, staff payroll, or office space used. For example, if the 501(c)(3) pays 60 percent of the total salaries of the employees and the 501(c)(4) pays 40 percent, the rent and overhead might also be divided proportionately. As with the rent, the 501(c)(4) could pay for all of the costs, but the 501(c)(3) may not subsidize the costs of the 501(c)(4).

Common space may be shared, but each organization must pay for its use of the space. For example, if a conference room is used by both the 501(c)(3) and the 501(c)(4), the organizations may share the cost according to the amount of time that each one uses this space, or they can calculate the cost based on the percentage of overhead for each organization. Whatever arrangement is used, the organizations should document the basis for the allocation and revisit it periodically to ensure its accuracy.⁶

Sharing of equipment may be structured in a similar manner, with each organization paying for its own use. In the case of a copying machine, for example, each organization could have its own code to record use and pay at the end of each month at a rate that recognizes the original purchase cost and maintenance cost of the machine. Similarly, long-distance charges, faxes, and other costs should be paid by each organization, preferably based on actual use, but at least divided on a documented, rational basis as part of overhead. If possible, each organization should arrange to receive a phone bill for long-distance charges and other costs that would be paid directly to the phone company.

Example:

PEN and the Education Fund share staff and a suite of offices. Each organization's share of the rent is based on the percentage of time that the staff works for each organization. While individual members of the staff work different percentages of their time for the two organizations, the blended percentage for the entire staff is 40 percent for PEN and 60 percent for the Education Fund. Therefore, PEN pays 40 percent of the rent and the Education Fund pays the remaining 60 percent.

d. Programmatic Independence

There are few clear rules describing the necessary programmatic separation between related 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations. Instead, there is a spectrum of risk, with less separation being riskier for a 501(c)(3), depending on the type of activities conducted by the 501(c)(4). For example, conducting joint lobbying or public education activities with a 501(c)(4) poses minimal risk for the 501(c)(3) because it is permitted to engage in these activities. The 501(c)(3) must, however, be mindful of its lobbying limits. There is considerably more risk in the case of a 501(c)(3)'s conducting nonpartisan voter education or registration activities in the same geographic areas or settings where the related 501(c)(4) is conducting partisan political work.

The 501(c)(3) may not allow a 501(c)(4) to use the 501(c)(3)'s educational materials for partisan political activities. For example, an affiliated 501(c)(4) may not use voting records prepared by the 501(c)(3) for its partisan activities. A 501(c)(3) must monitor and document each activity to avoid any risk of the activity's being transformed from a permissible to an impermissible activity based on subsequent related activities by an affiliated 501(c)(4).

B. GRANTS BETWEEN ORGANIZATIONS

A 501(c)(3) may make grants to a 501(c)(4) (affiliated or unaffiliated) so long as the funds may be used exclusively for educational or other purposes permissible for a 501(c)(3) and the 501(c)(3) receives reports or other documentation showing that this requirement has been honored.⁷ The 501(c)(3) may not, under any circumstances, provide funds to the 501(c)(4) that might in any way be used to support the 501(c)(4)'s partisan political activities. The grant

Example:

The Education Fund conducts a nonpartisan voter registration drive. The Education Fund may not give the list of registered voters to PEN or PENPAC. Instead, if permissible under state law, the Education Fund could make its list of registered voters available for sale at a fair-market rate through some form of arm's-length transaction, typically through a broker.

Example:

The Education Fund conducts an educational program on energy independence and the importance of clean and renewable energy to the environment and job creation. It runs ads, does canvassing to educate the public, and prepares reports for the media and policy makers. The program has been a priority for the Fund for two years. Before the election, PEN issues candidate voting records that highlight, among other issues, candidates' positions on energy independence; it also endorses candidates with strong environmental records (including supportive positions on energy issues) and runs ads in support of those candidates and the positions they have taken. PEN does not use any of the same slogans as the Education Fund. The mere fact that there is some overlap in the issue focus of the two organizations would not jeopardize the Fund's exemption as long as the Fund has its own programmatic reasons and goals for working on the issue.

agreement should specifically prohibit the use of the grant for these purposes. Such grants should, therefore, generally be earmarked for specific charitable or educational purposes. They should not cover fundraising expenses of the 501(c)(4). A grant that does not prohibit use of the funds for lobbying will count towards the 501(c)(3)'s grassroots lobbying limits.⁸

Example:

The Education Fund makes a grant to PEN to conduct a research project on chemical releases in five major metropolitan areas and to organize a conference to discuss the report. To support this grant, the Fund prepares a letter of agreement outlining the specific purposes for which the funds may and may not be used, a budget, a schedule for completion, and requirements for reporting grant activities to the Educational Fund. This grant is proper because the activity is one that the 501(c)(3) could permissibly undertake itself.

The 501(c)(3) has financial oversight responsibilities to ensure that its funds are expended on permissible charitable activities. If it fails to do so and the 501(c)(4) engages in lobbying activities with the funds, the 501(c)(3) risks having to treat its entire grant as a lobbying expenditure.⁹ Therefore, the 501(c)(4) must document that the 501(c)(3) funds were used for the specific purpose for which they were intended. The two organizations should execute a written grant agreement outlining the purpose of the grant and requesting that the 501(c)(4) provide the 501(c)(3) with periodic reports on exactly how the funds were used. A sample agreement for this type of “controlled grant” may be found in Appendix C.

A 501(c)(3) may also make a grant to a 501(c)(4) to conduct lobbying activities. However, such a grant will count against the 501(c)(3)’s lobbying limits, and, unless the 501(c)(3) takes the necessary precautions, the grant will count against the 501(c)(3)’s limits on grassroots lobbying, not the more generous limit for direct lobbying.¹⁰ The terms of such a grant should be set out in a grant agreement separately from any controlled grant (discussed above) made to the 501(c)(4). A grant made by a 501(c)(3) to a 501(c)(4) to support direct or a combination of direct and grassroots lobbying will count against the 501(c)(3)’s limit on grassroots lobbying activities unless the 501(c)(3) can demonstrate that some or all of the funds were spent on direct lobbying.¹¹ To avoid having the entire grant treated as grassroots lobbying by the 501(c)(3), the grant agreement must strictly prohibit the use of the funds for grassroots lobbying activities and require that the 501(c)(4) document that the funds were not spent for grassroots lobbying.

Example:

The Education Fund makes a grant of $25,000 to PEN to support PEN’s direct and grassroots lobbying on environmental issues. The grant requires that PEN spend no more than $5,000 of the grant for grassroots lobbying and that PEN provide documents to the Education Fund to show that this limit has not been exceeded. The Education Fund would treat this grant as a $5,000 grassroots lobbying expenditure and a $20,000 direct lobbying expenditure. If the grant agreement does not include these provisions, the Education Fund would be required to treat this grant as a $25,000 grassroots lobbying expenditure.

Conversely, the 501(c)(4) may give funds to the 501(c)(3) for any purpose that the 501(c)(3) may legally pursue. Since contributions to the 501(c)(4) are not tax-deductible, no restrictions exist on such transfers. Therefore, the 501(c)(4) may give unlimited funds to the 501(c)(3), directly or indirectly, without jeopardizing either organization’s tax-exempt status. While records of such transfers should be maintained, no written agreement is required.

C. LOANS BETWEEN ORGANIZATIONS

A 501(c)(3) may lend funds to a 501(c)(4). A 501(c)(4) may use a loan from a 501(c)(3) for general support or fundraising. However, a 501(c)(3), particularly an affiliated 501(c)(3), should not lend funds to a 501(c)(4) if the 501(c)(4) plans to use the funds for political activities or if other facts and circumstances would tend to show impermissible 501(c)(3) support for political activity by the 501(c)(4). If a 501(c)(3) lends money to a 501(c)(4), and if the 501(c)(4) then uses the money for political purposes, the 501(c)(3) entity—as well as the managers who approved the loan—may be subject to tax on the loan amount, and the 501(c)(3) organization may lose its exempt status.¹²

Any loan made by a 501(c)(3) to a 501(c)(4) should be an arm’s-length transaction made at commercially reasonable terms. Therefore, the two organizations should sign a written agreement demonstrating that the loan is made for a definite term, at a market rate of interest, with adequate collateral from the 501(c)(4) (using assets such as its membership list, for example).¹³ It is then essential that the organizations comply with the terms of the loan agreement, for a failure by the 501(c)(4) to repay the loan would be interpretable as evidence of an improper transfer from the 501(c)(3).

A 501(c)(4) may make a loan to the 501(c)(3) without such precautions, because it is possible to have the loan treated as a contribution to the 501(c)(3) without any adverse impact on the two organizations' tax status. However, it may nonetheless be advisable to have a written loan agreement if the 501(c)(4) would like to have the funds returned in the future. The agreement would document that the 501(c)(3) was obligated to repay the funds, thereby avoiding questions about why the 501(c)(3) was making the payment when it transferred money to the 501(c)(4) at some future point.

D. FUNDRAISING

1. Initial Start-Up Funding

One of the most difficult hurdles for nonprofit groups is to raise the initial seed money to launch a 501(c)(4). Because many private foundations do not generally fund 501(c)(4)s, fundraising is a much greater challenge than for tax-exempt charitable entities.¹⁴ Nevertheless, there are many avenues of possible support.

One option is for the 501(c)(4) to approach individual donors to the 501(c)(3). A direct mailing or personal solicitation of members or supporters of the 501(c)(3) is probably the best way to begin this process, although donors will not be able to take the tax deductions that they would get by contributing to a 501(c)(3). The 501(c)(4) must rent the 501(c)(3)'s mailing list in order to send direct mail to prospective contributors. To maximize its success, the appeal might focus on two types of donors: those who have reached the ceiling on their charitable deductions and could no longer claim a deduction for contributing to the 501(c)(3) and those who support the mission of the 501(c)(4) and want to fund the more extensive advocacy activities that 501(c)(4)s may undertake.

Example:

The board of directors of the Education Fund sets up PEN. PEN rents the Education Fund's mailing list and sends the Fund's members and contributors a letter stating, "We are setting up a 501(c)(4) organization that will be able to more actively protect the environment in our state. Although you will not be able to claim a tax deduction for your 501(c)(4) contribution, your money will be able to do more than if given to a 501(c)(3), including funding a significant lobbying campaign on our issues."

Other fundraising options for a new 501(c)(4) organization include:

- approaching community foundations and other philanthropies that are not private foundations;
- approaching corporations that may be able to write off their donations as promotional expenses rather than as charitable deductions;
- approaching trade and professional associations, unions, and other noncharitable groups in the community; and
- organizing community canvassing around its lobbying program or holding other events focused on particular issues.

2. Joint Fundraising with a 501(c)(3)

A 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) may raise funds jointly, provided that no funds are solicited to support political activities of the 501(c)(4). Each organization must pay its share of the fundraising costs. Therefore, if the solicitation raises funds for both organizations with relatively equal emphasis, the costs could be split equally between the organizations. Another reasonable approach is to allocate the costs of the solicitation based on the ratio of receipts for each organization. Therefore, if the 501(c)(3) raises $60,000 and the 501(c)(4) raises $30,000, the costs of the solicitation could be divided proportionately, assigning two-thirds to the 501(c)(3) and one-third to the 501(c)(4).

Prior to undertaking joint fundraising, the two organizations should agree in writing on the terms: how costs will be allocated, including related expenses such as staff time and materials; what services the organization collecting the funds will perform; and the amount that the other organization will pay for these services.

Example:

PEN and the Education Fund send out a joint fundraising letter describing the Education Fund's research and educational activities as well as PEN's lobbying program. Contributors are invited to write separate checks to the Education Fund and PEN. Alternately, the contributor could be given the choice of dividing the contribution between PEN and the Fund by sending a single check to PEN and designating on the reply card how much of the contribution should go to each organization. PEN would deposit the funds according to the contributor's designation. Only the contribution designated for the Fund is tax-deductible. PEN is required to inform prospective donors that contributions and gifts to PEN are not deductible for federal income tax purposes.

Joint solicitations may make reference to the 501(c)(3) as an organization "related to" or "affiliated with" the 501(c)(4) and should discuss each organization's activities and, to the extent possible, distinguish between their programs. Contributors to the 501(c)(3) should be informed that contributions will be used to support research and nonpartisan studies about current issues or some other charitable purpose. Similarly, contributors should be informed that donations to the 501(c)(4) will support lobbying or other activities.

However, a 501(c)(4) soliciting funds expressly for political activities or its PAC should not do so in a communication that also requests funds for a 501(c)(3). The IRS has said that any joint fundraising will be carefully scrutinized to determine whether the 501(c)(3) is allowing its name or goodwill to be used to further an activity that the 501(c)(3) is prohibited from conducting.¹⁵

Each organization is required to comply separately with the charitable solicitation registration and reporting requirements applicable under state law.

E. MANAGING PUBLICATIONS, LISTS, AND JOINT WEBSITES

1. Publications

If the 501(c)(3) generally requires that an outside group pay for the use of space in its publication, the same terms should apply to the affiliated 501(c)(4). If the 501(c)(3) allows other organizations to submit occasional articles or to run announcements of activities in the publication free of charge, that same courtesy may be extended to the 501(c)(4), subject to one exception: the 501(c)(3) should not allow any organization, whether related or unrelated, to place material in the publication for free that the 501(c)(3) could not publish on its own under its tax-exempt status. In particular, a 501(c)(3) should avoid running articles about partisan political activities in its magazine or other publication for free.

If a related 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) has a magazine or other publication, the sponsoring organization may allow the other organization to pay for its share of the content of each issue. Again, if any charitable funds are used to pay for some portion of the publication, it is generally advisable not to have any partisan content in the publication.

Example:

PEN would like to publish several articles in the PEN Education Fund's quarterly magazine. The articles discuss PEN's grassroots lobbying campaigns. The Fund may publish these articles and charge PEN the fair market value of the cost of the allocable portion of the magazine to avoid having the costs count against the Fund's limit on lobbying.

Conversely, if PEN publishes a monthly magazine, the Fund may run articles in it and pay the allocable cost of space. However, there would be a risk if, during an election year, PEN publishes editorials featuring its endorsed candidates. While there is no clear authority on whether the Fund could pay for part of the publication, there is significant risk that the IRS would view the use of 501(c)(3) funds to pay for part of a magazine with political content as an impermissible political expenditure.

Example:

PEN wants to run a copy of its partisan voter guide in the Fund's magazine. The Fund should not accept this guide for publication because it could jeopardize its exempt status. If, however, PEN prepares and presents for publication a candidate questionnaire that meets IRS criteria for nonpartisan voter education, the Fund could run this piece.

A 501(c)(3) may, however, sell advertising in its newsletter to any entity, including a candidate. If such ads are available, the 501(c)(3) may sell them to candidates and any other entity but must do so without regard to political preferences and must charge the same fair market value. These advertisements should be identified as "paid advertisements."

If the 501(c)(4) publishes the magazine or newsletter, the same limits do not apply to the 501(c)(3)'s placing of articles or contributing to the publication. As a 501(c)(4) can do anything that a 501(c)(3) can do without jeopardizing its tax status, the 501(c)(3) may prepare articles and submit them for placement in a 501(c)(4) magazine. The 501(c)(4) has the option of charging fair market value for the article or running it free of cost. Therefore, PEN's magazine may run any piece prepared by the Fund without charging the Fund for placement.

2. Sharing Lists and Databases

If the 501(c)(3) has a contact, email, or membership list, it may rent the list for fair market value in an arm's-length transaction to the 501(c)(4).¹⁶ It is advisable to have a letter of agreement to document the terms of the transaction and the assessed rental value of the list. Alternatively, the groups could exchange names if both organizations have lists, or parts of lists, of equal value. It may also be possible for each group to share the costs of developing a list. In this case, the costs must be divided evenly or in some reasonable manner to avoid the impression that the 501(c)(3) is paying any of the 501(c)(4)'s costs. In this case, each organization would own the list and be able to use it for its programs.

Similar principles should be used in sharing a voter file database or modeling. Many organizations that engage in grassroots organizing and civic engagement use voter files and modeling to identify those people to whom they can most effectively direct their messages and communications. If a 501(c)(3) pays for these resources, it must rent the resources at fair market value to the 501(c)(4). The 501(c)(4) may not be allowed to use the resources at no charge unless the use is limited to charitable or educational purposes in which the 501(c)(3) is permitted to engage. Particular caution should be used if the 501(c)(4) intends to use the database or modeling for partisan political purposes. Organizations should seek guidance before engaging in this type of data transfer or exchange. This type of transaction raises complex issues and there is little guidance available as to its legality.

Example:

If the Fund rents its list to third parties for $75 per thousand names, PEN may rent it at that same rate. The Fund may allow PEN to use the list free of charge if the use is consistent with the exempt purpose of the Fund, that is, its educational purpose. For example, if PEN produces an educational study that does not constitute lobbying, the Fund could contribute its list to PEN in furtherance of this educational activity. The transaction would be an in-kind contribution to PEN.

3. Applying for a Separate Nonprofit Postal Permit

An affiliated 501(c)(4) may not use the postal permit of the 501(c)(3). Each organization must apply for and use its own separate nonprofit postal permit. To apply for a postal permit to mail at the special bulk third-class rates, the organization is required to file Form 3624, "Application to Mail at Special Bulk Third Class Rates." The application is available at post offices and on the Alliance of Nonprofit Mailers' website at www.nonprofitmailers.org. While the organization must pay first-class postage while the application is under review, it may apply for a refund of the difference between the first- and third-class rates if the permit is granted.¹⁷

4. Joint and Linked Websites

Most related organizations maintain websites that are shared between the 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4). Otherwise, the two organizations' websites are linked in some manner. In a situation where a 501(c)(3)'s affiliated 501(c)(4) does not engage in partisan activity to support or oppose candidates or political parties, a shared website works well. If the 501(c)(4) engages in partisan political activity, the safest strategy is to maintain separate websites, one for each organization. As with other costs discussed above, in either case, each organization must pay its share of the costs of its website or its share of a joint website. It is important for the 501(c)(3) to be able to demonstrate that it is not subsidizing, directly or indirectly, the work of its affiliated 501(c)(4).

501(c)(4) Website. If only the 501(c)(4) maintains a website, it may post content on that website about the programmatic activities or events of any 501(c)(3), including its affiliated 501(c)(3). In that case, the 501(c)(3) may, but is not required to pay the (c)(4) for the cost of posting the material.

Shared Website. If a 501(c)(3) organization owns a website and allows its related 501(c)(4) to post content on the website (or if the two organizations have a joint website), and if the 501(c)(4) conducts political activity, then political material on the website may be attributed to the 501(c)(3), resulting in a violation of the 501(c)(3)'s tax status.

In 2009 the IRS found that a 501(c)(3) organization had engaged in prohibited political activity when its website housed pages for its related 501(c)(4) organization.¹⁸ In that situation the 501(c)(3) organization maintained a website with the 501(c)(4)'s pages nested within that site. The layout and design of all pages on the site were the same. The 501(c)(3) logo appeared on every page of the site; the 501(c)(4) pages also bore the logo of the 501(c)(4) organization. Endorsements of political candidates appeared on the 501(c)(4) pages. Despite the fact that the 501(c)(4) paid a proportionate share of the website costs under a cost-sharing agreement between the two organizations, the IRS determined that the 501(c)(3) had engaged in political intervention by hosting the endorsements on its website.

An organization may not use web links in a manner that supports or opposes candidates.

To avoid this pitfall, a joint website maintained by a 501(c)(3) and its affiliated 501(c)(4) must clearly distinguish between the content that belongs to the 501(c)(3) and that which belongs to the 501(c)(4). The 501(c)(3)'s banner, logo, address, site links, disclaimer, or similar identifying information specific to the 501(c)(3) should not appear on any of the 501(c)(4) Web pages. Each entity should pay for its proportional costs of the website. It may also be helpful to use a distinct layout and design for the portion of the website devoted to the 501(c)(3) so as to distinguish it noticeably from the portion of the website devoted to the 501(c)(4). Even with these safeguards, however, it is unclear how the IRS would view the shared website.

Links to affiliated and unaffiliated websites. According to the IRS, not only are organizations responsible for the content on their websites, but they are also responsible for their Web links. An organization may not use web links in a manner that supports or opposes candidates. To determine whether a 501(c)(3) is engaging in impermissible political activity by linking from its website to another website, the IRS will look at the context of the sponsoring organization's link.

Only in very narrow situations may a 501(c)(3) link to a website with political content. The facts and circumstances considered by the IRS will include the language that appears on the 501(c)(3)'s website describing the link; whether the 501(c)(3)'s links treat all candidates equally; whether the link serves a proper tax-exempt purpose (such as nonpartisan public education) or, conversely, makes it appear that the organization is supporting an electoral message; and the directness of the links between the organization's website and the Web page containing material supporting or opposing a candidate. The IRS has not said what number of links constitutes sufficient separation, but "electronic proximity—including the number of 'clicks' that separate the objectionable material from the 501(c)(3)'s website—is a significant consideration."¹⁹

After establishing a link, an organization has an ongoing duty to monitor it. If an organization links to an external website, and if that external website later changes its content so that it becomes political in nature, the 501(c)(3) organization may be held liable for conducting political activity, even though the link was permissible at the time when it was posted.

In a memorandum regarding the 2008 elections, the IRS indicated that it would "not pursue, at this time, cases involving a link between a website of a section 501(c)(3) organization and the homepage of a website operated by a related section 501(c)(4) organization."²⁰ Of course, if the link from the 501(c)(3) website to its related 501(c)(4) includes explicit political language, such as, "Click here to see our endorsed candidates," the IRS might pursue a finding of political intervention by the 501(c)(3) despite the position stated in its 2008 memorandum.

² In most cases, an organization will incorporate in the state in which most of its activities take place. However, some organizations choose to incorporate in a different state, which may provide legal advantages related to treatment of nonprofits under state law or the certainty of an established body of state case law concerning corporations. A full discussion of these strategic issues is beyond the scope of this guide. An organization with questions in this area should consult a lawyer for more information.

CHAPTER III: RULES GOVERNING ACTIVITIES OF POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

A. INTRODUCTION TO POLITICAL ORGANIZATIONS

A political organization is another type of tax-exempt entity (organized under IRC section 527) and is used primarily to fund activities designed to influence the nomination or election of candidates for public office. Political organizations do not operate under the same constraints as 501(c)(3)s, which are prohibited from influencing elections, or 501(c)(4)s, which may influence elections only as a secondary activity.

There are three general categories of political organizations as listed below:

Federal PAC: A Federal PAC as discussed in this guide is any “political committee” registered with the Federal Election Commission (FEC) to make contributions to or expenditures on behalf of federal candidates or committees. Within this category there are a variety of different structures and types of PACs that are subject to specific rules on fundraising and spending. A Federal PAC may also participate in state and local elections where permitted by state law.

State PAC: A State PAC is any political organization registered with a state election agency to make contributions to or expenditures on behalf of state or local candidates or committees. A State PAC may not participate in federal elections.

527 Organization: A political organization may also seek to influence federal or state and local elections through activities that do not require it to register with the FEC (in the case of federal elections) or the state election agency (in the case of state elections). Such political organizations, sometimes referred to as “527 organizations,” operate largely outside the parameters of the FECA and state law. They are, however, required to register with and report to the IRS. See Chapter IV, § D for more details.

This guide primarily addresses the rules governing Federal PACs and 527 organizations established and maintained as separate segregated funds (SSFs) of 501(c)(4)s. This guide does not provide extensive detail on the political activities conducted by nonconnected political organizations, but it tries to note where the rules differ from those governing activities conducted by SSFs. Nor does this guide address in any detail political organizations established to support or oppose state and local candidates. Each state has its own campaign finance laws governing this type of activity. Generally, such information is available through the secretary of state or election commission.¹ In addition, the Alliance for Justice website has a section devoted to state campaign finance laws at <http://bolderadvocacy.org/navigate-the-rules/state-resources>.

B. OVERVIEW OF FEDERAL PACS

There are various types of Federal PACs, each of which is discussed below. The distinctions among these structures depend on many factors, including the types of expenditures the PAC intends to make and the relationship, if any, to a corporation or labor union. Throughout this guide, these terms will be used to provide additional information on the rules and restrictions for each type of Federal PAC. Some Federal PACs will fall within several categories. For example, a Federal PAC may be an SSF and qualify as a multicandidate committee.

A Federal PAC is defined as “any committee, club, association or other group” (1) that makes more than $1,000 in political expenditures or receives more than $1,000 in contributions during a calendar year for the purpose of influencing federal elections and (2) whose “major purpose” is the nomination or election of federal candidates.²

A Super PAC is a federal political committee that may make only independent expenditures in federal races; it may not make any in-kind or direct contributions to candidates.

1. Traditional PAC or Super PAC?

Traditional PAC: Throughout this guide, the term “Traditional PAC” is used to discuss a PAC that is registered with the FEC that is not a Super PAC. A Traditional PAC may make contributions and expenditures to influence the outcome of federal elections, as discussed in Section B of this chapter, in compliance with the Federal Election Campaign Act (FECA). It is subject to contribution limits from its contributors. These limits are indexed for inflation in odd-numbered years.³ It may also participate in state and local elections where permitted by state law. A Traditional PAC may be operated as either an SSF or a Nonconnected PAC.

Super PAC: A Super PAC is registered with the FEC and may make only independent expenditures, not direct or in-kind contributions, to influence federal campaigns. It may receive unlimited contributions from permissible sources as discussed below. It may also participate in state and local elections where permitted by state law. At the time of publication, it is unclear whether a Super PAC may be operated as an SSF.

In SpeechNow v. FEC, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia held that, if a PAC makes independent expenditures only and does not make any direct monetary or in-kind contributions to federal candidates, the PAC may accept unlimited contributions from individual donors. The Super PAC must register and file reports with the FEC like other Federal PACs. While the court did not address the ability of such a PAC to accept corporate or labor union contributions to its federal account, the FEC ruled in two subsequent advisory opinions that a Super PAC may also receive unlimited contributions from corporations and unions and presumably also from other sources that are permitted to make disbursements in connection with a federal election.⁴

2. Separate Segregated Fund or Nonconnected PAC?

Separate Segregated Fund: An SSF is a political committee established under the sponsorship and continuing control of a “connected organization.”⁵ A Traditional PAC may be established as an SSF. At the time of publication, the issue of whether a Super PAC may be an SSF is unresolved. (See Chapter V.) The connected organization of an SSF may be any form of corporation, including an incorporated tax-exempt membership organization (other than a 501(c)(3)). While the corporation may not make contributions in federal elections, it may participate indirectly by creating an SSF that is a Federal PAC to raise voluntary contributions from eligible contributors. With some exceptions, treasury funds of an incorporated connected organization may not be transferred to the SSF, but the corporation may finance the establishment, solicitation, and administrative costs of the SSF. The corporation may solicit only its restricted class (bona fide members, executive and administrative personnel, and their families) for contributions to the SSF. Chapter IV discusses establishing and operating an SSF.

Nonconnected PAC: A Nonconnected PAC has no connection to a corporation or union. Again, both a Traditional PAC and a Super PAC may be established as a Nonconnected Federal PAC. While individuals otherwise associated with a tax-exempt organization (including a 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4)) may form a Nonconnected Committee, it must be maintained separately from the tax-exempt organization. Any apparent direct or indirect financial support provided by the tax-exempt organization will place the Nonconnected Committee in legal jeopardy of being considered an SSF. It has the advantage of being able to solicit contributions from the general public, but it must pay its own administrative and fundraising expenses directly from these contributions and not benefit in any fashion from the resources of the 501(c)(4). There are some exceptions to this rule for Super PACs, as discussed below and in Chapter V.

SSF Federal PAC	Nonconnected Federal PAC
Established and maintained by a corporation or labor union	Established by a group of individuals, not a corporation or union
May solicit contributions only from a defined group of eligible contributors, including “members” and executive and administrative employees and their families	May solicit the general public for contributions
May have its administrative and fundraising costs paid by the corporation or union that controls it	Must pay all administrative and operating expenses from solicited funds

3. Multicandidate Committee Status (Traditional PACs Only)

Both types of Traditional PACs—Nonconnected PACs and SSFs—may qualify for multicandidate political committee status. This designation has no relevance to a Super PAC, however, because a Super PAC may not make contributions. A multicandidate committee is any committee that: (1) has been registered with the FEC for at least six months, (2) has more than 50 contributors, and (3) has made contributions to at least five candidates for federal office. Once a committee has qualified as a multicandidate committee, it must file Form 1M (“Notification of Multicandidate Status”), alerting the FEC that the committee has achieved this status. A qualified multicandidate committee may give a candidate up to $5,000 per election, whereas a PAC that does not have multicandidate status is limited to contributions of $2,500. When making contributions to candidates, a multicandidate committee must give to a recipient candidate or campaign committee a written notification that it has qualified as a multicandidate committee. This statement may be preprinted on the committee’s checks.

C. TRADITIONAL PAC PARTICIPATION IN FEDERAL ELECTIONS

1. Direct Support of Candidates by Traditional PACs

Traditional PACs (both SSFs and Nonconnected PACs) may make contributions to federal candidates and committees. Note that Super PACs may not make contributions.

a. Direct Cash Contributions

A Traditional PAC may make direct contributions, usually a check in a lawful amount made out to a candidate’s campaign and reported to the FEC by the candidate and the Traditional PAC. Contributions from a Traditional PAC that has qualified for multicandidate committee status to federal candidates are limited to $5,000 per candidate per election. The primary and general elections count as separate elections. Thus, a Traditional PAC may contribute $10,000 to a candidate in an election cycle if the candidate runs in both a primary and a general election. Prior to qualifying as a multicandidate committee, a Traditional PAC may contribute up to $2,500 per candidate per election.

b. In-Kind Contributions

Traditional PACs may offer services or goods to candidates at no charge or at reduced cost. All such in-kind contributions count against the single-contribution limit that applies to cash contributions. Thus, if a Traditional PAC that qualifies for multicandidate committee status conducts a phone bank coordinated with a federal candidate worth $1,000, the Traditional PAC may contribute only another $4,000 in cash toward the same election. Valuation of in-kind contributions must be at fair market value, not at actual cost to the organization.

A Traditional PAC, for example, might charge a candidate its actual costs in making available the use of office space or other facilities. If the charge is below the fair market value of what is provided, the difference between the actual charge and the fair market value represents a reportable in-kind contribution subject to the contribution limits.

c. Earmarking (Bundling) Contributions

An earmarked contribution is one directed by a contributor through an intermediary or conduit, which sends a “bundle” of checks to the candidate for whom they are intended. Bundling enables individual contributors to make personal contributions to a candidate in such a way that the candidate recognizes that the contributor is committed to a particular public policy issue or organization. A Traditional PAC may function as a conduit for earmarked (bundled) contributions. A political organization not registered with the FEC, including a 527 organization, may not bundle contributions.⁶ A 501(c)(4) is also prohibited from bundling, but its SSF Traditional PAC may do so as long as all the associated costs are paid for by the SSF.⁷

If proper procedures are followed, bundled contributions count only against the original contributor’s contribution limit, not against the conduit’s contribution limit. However, if the conduit exercises any “direction or control” over the choice of recipient candidate, then the earmarked contribution is considered to be a contribution by both the original contributor and the conduit.⁸ The FEC has not issued clear guidance defining “direction or control.” When a Traditional PAC solicitation offers prospective donors a choice of several candidates to whom the donors may contribute, “direction or control” generally has not been deemed present.

In addition, a Traditional PAC that is bundling contributions for candidates must follow specific guidelines for recordkeeping, reporting, timing, and designation of earmarked contributions.⁹

The costs associated with soliciting the contributions, forwarding the contributions to the candidate, and associated recordkeeping and reporting must be treated as either in-kind contributions or independent expenditures to the candidate benefiting from the contributions.

FEC Form 3L. Candidate committees, political party committees, and leadership PACs that receive bundled contributions are required to file bundling disclosure reports on FEC Form 3L if they receive two or more bundled contributions that in the aggregate exceed the “reporting threshold” during the applicable reporting period. The reporting threshold for 2012 is $16,700; this amount is indexed for inflation. For purposes of the Form 3L, the term “bundled contribution” is defined broadly to include any contribution that is either (1) forwarded to a reporting committee by an LDA lobbyist/registrant or lobbyist/registrant PAC or (2) received by the reporting committee and credited to a lobbyist/registrant or lobbyist/registrant PAC through “records, designations, or other means of recognizing that a certain amount of money has been raised.”¹⁰

d. Polling Activity

FEC regulations set out special rules for the donation of polling data to candidates.¹¹ Because poll results represent something of value, the donation of polling results to federal candidates generally constitutes an in-kind contribution and must be paid for by a Traditional PAC within its contribution limits. However, the poll results are not an in-kind contribution if, before providing them to a candidate, the committee makes them public through a press release or similar means, as long as there has been no coordination or prearrangement with the candidate.

A Traditional PAC that donates poll results to several candidates may calculate the reportable in-kind contribution to each by dividing the total cost of the poll by the number of candidates who receive it. As a result, a poll that cost $5,000, provided immediately in full to each of five candidates, is only a $1,000 in-kind contribution to each.

The regulations use the concept of “aging,” by which the value of a poll as an in-kind contribution declines as time passes and the results become stale. These values are keyed to the date on which the contribution of polling results is made to the candidate:

- Poll results provided 15 days or less from the date on which the Federal PAC receives the poll result are worth 100 percent of the calculated value.
- Poll results provided 16 to 60 days from the date on which the Federal PAC receives the poll result are worth 50 percent of the calculated value.
- Poll results provided 61 to 180 days from the date on which the Federal PAC receives the poll result are worth 5 percent of the calculated value.

After 180 days, the poll no longer carries value and is not a reportable in-kind contribution if provided to the candidate.

If a 501(c)(4) has significant investment income, it may be advantageous to carry out independent expenditures through a Federal PAC.

2. Independent Expenditures—Rules and Reporting

Both Traditional PACs and Super PACs are permitted to make independent expenditures in federal races.

While 501(c)(4) organizations may also make independent expenditures, they may be subject to tax under IRC section 527(f). (See Chapter I, § C(5).) Therefore, if a 501(c)(4) has significant investment income, it may be advantageous to carry out independent expenditures through a Federal PAC.

A Traditional PAC or Super PAC makes an independent expenditure when it finances a communication containing express advocacy, provided that the expenditure is not made with the cooperation or consent of, or in coordination with or at the request or suggestion of, any candidate or the agent of any candidate. (See Chapter I, § D(2) for a discussion of “express advocacy.”)

Independent expenditures are unlimited and do not count as contributions, either direct or in-kind. If, however, an expenditure is found not to have been independent, it is a contribution and therefore subject to FECA contribution limits. For this reason, Traditional PACs and Super PACs that anticipate making independent expenditures must be careful to avoid coordination with a candidate, a candidate’s campaign, or the appropriate political party. (See Chapter I, § F for a detailed discussion of coordination.)

With few exceptions, communications, including independent expenditures, paid for by a Traditional PAC or Super PAC must contain a disclaimer notice stating who financed the communication and that the communication was not authorized by any candidate.¹² See Section F of this chapter for a discussion of disclaimer requirements.

Independent expenditures must be reported by a Traditional PAC or Super PAC and must be individually itemized on Schedule E of FEC Form 3X (“Report of Receipts and Disbursements”) once the calendar year total paid to a vendor or other person exceeds $200 with respect to a particular election.¹³ All independent expenditures totaling $10,000 or more relating to a specific race must be reported on FEC Form 3X within 48 hours of public dissemination or distribution. Each additional time that further expenditures for that election reach $10,000 up to 20 days before the election, the organization must file another report within 48 hours. Within the final 20 days before an election, the threshold amount drops to $1,000 and the reporting period shortens to 24 hours. Contracts obligating funds, as well as actual disbursements, must be included.

A 527 must expend its funds exclusively to influence elections.

D. 527 ORGANIZATIONS

Entities referred to in this guide and in common political parlance as “527s” are political organizations that seek to influence elections but conduct activities that cause them not to be subject to the rules and requirements applicable to Federal PACs and State PACs. While the term “527” is generally used to describe this type of group, it is important to remember that all political organizations, including Federal PACs and State PACs, are exempt from tax under section 527. Particularly with the emergence of Super PACs, this type of 527 organization is considerably less likely to be useful. The major advantage of the Super PAC is that it may conduct all the same activities and carry out unlimited independent expenditures. The most obvious advantage of a 527 that is not a Super PAC is that the 527 is not required to register with the FEC or similar state agency because it does not qualify as a PAC or political committee for the purposes of federal or state law. It is required, however, to register and report with the IRS. (See Chapter V, § D.)

1. Tax Rules

A 527 organization may be established as a separate segregated fund of a 501(c)(4) organization (or any 501(c) organization except a 501(c)(3)), or it may be a nonconnected entity. Unlike a 501(c)(4), which must limit its political activities to ensure that they do not compromise its primary purpose, a 527 must expend its funds exclusively to influence elections.

The types of voter education communications that may be developed and paid for by a 527 organization include:

- voter guides on issues that identify where particular candidates stand on those issues;
- voting records that show the positions of incumbent officeholders and may compare challengers’ views on the same issues;
- some types of grassroots lobbying communications and issue advocacy, as well as door-to-door canvassing and other events timed and targeted to influence an election; and
- voter registration and voter turnout activities targeted to areas where the issues are thought to be important to voters’ choices.

For example, a 527 organization may conduct voter education and registration activities that are timed to coincide with an election and targeted at geographic areas where elections are occurring. The fact that these activities are conducted to influence the public’s judgments about the positions of particular candidates and officeholders distinguishes them from similar activities that may be conducted solely for lobbying or educational purposes by 501(c)(3)s and 501(c)(4)s. In addition, because of the election-related content, targeting, and timing, a 501(c)(3) would not be permitted to distribute similar voter guides or records or conduct partisan voter registration.

2. Campaign Finance Rules

While a 527 organization must have a political objective for its activities, if it conducts express advocacy on the federal level, it may not have influencing federal elections as its major purpose, or else it will be required to register and report as a Federal PAC. “Major purpose” is not well-defined, but the term certainly means at least that a majority of a PAC’s spending over time pertains to federal elections. In recent cases the FEC has evaluated an organization’s governing documents, solicitations, and communications to determine its “major purpose.”¹⁴ If a PAC does cross the $1,000 express-advocacy barrier, but influencing federal elections is not its major purpose, then it needs to register only with the IRS and not with the FEC, although it will have to comply with the FEC’s special reporting and message disclaimer requirements for its independent expenditures and electioneering communications.

A 527 organization must also avoid any coordination or cooperation with a candidate, the candidate’s campaign, or a political party in conducting its activities, largely because it cannot make direct or indirect contributions. If the activities are conducted in coordination or in cooperation with a candidate or a candidate's campaign, the entire expenditure will be considered an in-kind contribution for the purpose of federal election law. (See Chapter I, § F for a discussion of coordination.)

Example:

The PEN board votes to create a voter education 527, a distinct fund from PEN or PENPAC. This 527 decides to pay for the research, development, and distribution of a voter guide that informs the voters about the candidates in a particular race. The guide lists the candidates and their positions on two issues central to the campaign and the organization's agenda. It will be sent out two weeks before the election in an area where the 527 has determined, through research, that potential voters are most concerned about these issues. This activity is timed and targeted to have an election-related impact and would therefore qualify as an appropriate activity for the 527.

E. SUPPORT OF STATE OR LOCAL CANDIDATES

Some states permit 501(c)(4)s and other corporations to make contributions directly to state and local candidates with or without specific limits and reporting requirements. States that do not permit direct contributions to candidates may permit corporations, including 501(c)(4)s, to establish and maintain State PACs. States vary as to whether a corporation may be permitted to pay the fundraising and administrative costs of a State PAC. In many states a group may make contributions to state or local candidates from its Federal PAC. These must then be reported to the FEC on the federal report, and the state may also require a separate state report. Because every state law is different and many states require the formation and legal registration of a State PAC, it is essential to consult state law and advisable to consult counsel regarding these requirements.¹⁵

F. DISCLAIMERS FOR PUBLIC COMMUNICATIONS

All public communications by a Traditional PAC or Super PAC must carry a disclaimer, regardless of whether the communication expressly advocates the election or defeat of a candidate.¹⁶ A public communication includes any broadcast, newspaper or magazine ad, billboard or mass mailing, telephone bank to the general public, or other form of general public political advertising.¹⁷ In addition, Internet advertising (communications placed for a fee on another person's website), email of more than 500 substantially similar communications, and all websites of a Traditional PAC or Super PAC must also have a disclaimer.¹⁸

1. Format

Disclaimers must be "clear and conspicuous," so as to give the viewer, listener, or reader adequate notice of the entity paying for and authorizing the communication.¹⁹ The disclaimer must not be difficult to read or hear, and it may not be easily overlooked. It must be contained in a printed box, printed with reasonable contrast, and set apart from the rest of the communication. A disclaimer in a 12-point font size satisfies the requirement when used in materials no larger than two by three feet.

2. Content—General Rule

If the communication is authorized by a candidate (or the candidate's campaign committee or an agent of either) but paid for by a Traditional PAC, the disclaimer must clearly state who paid for the communication and that it is authorized by the candidate, committee, or agent. If the communication is paid for by a Traditional PAC or Super PAC but is not authorized by the candidate, committee, or agent, then the disclaimer must state the PAC's full name and permanent street address, its telephone number or Web address, and the fact that the communication is not authorized by any candidate or campaign.

Example:

PENPAC pays for an advertisement authorized by Smith for Congress. The advertisement will be treated as an in-kind contribution subject to the applicable contribution limits. The disclaimer could read: "Paid for by Protect the Environment Now PAC and authorized by Smith for Congress."

Example:

PENPAC pays for an independent expenditure in support of Smith for Congress. The disclaimer could read: "Paid for by Protect the Environment Now PAC, www.penpac.org [or phone number or street address], and not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee."

3. Special Rules for Different Types of Communications

a. Broadcast Communications

Communications authorized by a candidate. For radio and television communications authorized by a candidate (or the candidate's campaign or agent), candidates must verbally identify themselves and state that they have approved the communication. For television communications, the statement must be either conveyed by a full-screen view of the candidate or accompanied by a clearly identifiable photograph of the candidate that appears during the voiceover and covers at least 80 percent of the vertical screen height. Additionally, television ads must include a statement that appears at the end of the advertisement, stating content similar to the audio statement, that (1) appears for at least four seconds, (2) has a reasonable degree of color contrast between the disclaimer and the background image, and (3) occupies at least four percent of the vertical picture height.

Communications not authorized by a candidate. Communications paid for by a political committee or other entity and not authorized by a candidate, such as independent expenditures, require a disclaimer stating the name and address of the political committee responsible for the communication and, if applicable, the name of the sponsoring committee's connected organization.

If the communication is broadcast on the radio, the statement must be spoken clearly. If the communication is transmitted on television, cable, or satellite, the statement must be accompanied by a voiceover stating the information, and the disclaimer must appear in writing at the end of the communication in a clearly readable manner with a reasonable degree of color contrast to the background and be shown for a period of at least four seconds.

Example:

The following statement satisfies the "responsible for" requirements for broadcast communications: "Paid for by Protect the Environment Now PAC, www.penpac.org [or street address or phone number], and not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee. PENPAC is responsible for the content of this advertisement."

The name of the connected organization is not required if its name is already provided in the original statement. For example, because the name of the connected organization must be restated in the name of its separate segregated fund, stating the name of the separate segregated fund only would be sufficient.

b. Phone Banks

Live caller phone banks to the general public, defined as more than 500 substantially similar phone calls within a 30-day period to individuals other than a group's members, must carry a disclaimer.²⁰ The caller must identify the name of the entity paying for the call and, if applicable, the name of the sponsoring Federal PAC's connected organization, as well as whether the call is authorized by a candidate or candidate's committee. To be clear and conspicuous, it must be delivered in a manner that is not hard to hear (either because it is not audible or because it is stated too quickly). It is not yet clear whether a caller would need to state the complete disclaimer at the beginning of the phone call, or whether it is acceptable to provide some of the information at the end of the conversation. (See also Chapter IV, § B(8) regarding additional rules applicable to robocalls.)

Example:

PENPAC pays for a phone bank to the general public, and no candidate or campaign authorizes the communication. The following disclaimer could be used: "This call is paid for by PENPAC and is not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee. PENPAC is the political action committee of Protect the Environment Now. You can learn more about PENPAC at our website, www.penpac.org."

c. Websites

The website of a Traditional PAC or Super PAC must state the name of the PAC paying for the website and whether it is authorized by a candidate or committee. Password-protected websites available only to an organization's members are not required to have a disclaimer. Where required, the disclaimer must be "clear and conspicuous." Although the current regulations are silent about specific requirements for website disclaimers, the FEC previously approved a Traditional PAC's website containing a disclaimer that (1) appeared on the homepage and immediately following a request for contributor information and (2) was printed in the same type size as much of the text in the body of the website. If a 501(c)(4) has pages on its website that are paid for by its Traditional PAC or Super PAC, those PAC pages should have a disclaimer.

Example:

If PENPAC's website is available to the general public and is not authorized by any candidate or campaign, the following disclaimer could be used: "Paid for by PENPAC, www.penpac.org, and not authorized by any candidate or candidate's committee."

CHAPTER IV: ESTABLISHING AND OPERATING A SEPARATE SEGREGATED FUND

A separate segregated fund (SSF) is a political organization that is tax-exempt under Internal Revenue Code section 527. It may be a Traditional Federal PAC, State PAC, or a 527 organization that does not report to the Federal Election Commission. At the time of publication, the issue of whether a Super PAC may be established as an SSF is unresolved. Assuming that this issue is clarified in the future, the rules discussed below will apply to Super PACs as well, except where noted. (See Chapter V.) An SSF may be established and maintained by a 501(c) organization, including a 501(c)(4), but not a 501(c)(3).¹ Generally, an SSF's purpose is to conduct political activities in which the 501(c)(4) is not permitted to engage or that may subject the 501(c)(4) to tax if they are carried out directly. The SSF account must be strictly segregated from the other accounts of the 501(c).

This chapter describes the basic rules for (1) establishing an SSF, (2) starting an SSF that is a Federal PAC registered with the FEC, (3) accounting and reporting responsibilities for all Federal PACs, and (4) registering with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) as an SSF that intends to conduct activities to influence elections without triggering registration and reporting requirements under federal or state campaign finance law (a "527"). You will need to consult state law to determine the rules for establishing an SSF that operates as a state-level political committee.

A. RULES APPLICABLE TO ESTABLISHING ALL SSFS

1. How to Organize the Committee

There are some rules that apply to all SSFs whether they are registered with the FEC, state agency, or the IRS. There are others that apply only to certain SSFs, and those distinctions are noted.

In order for an SSF to qualify and maintain eligibility for tax exemption under IRC section 527, it must be organized and operated for the purpose of accepting contributions and/or making expenditures for an exempt function. An "exempt function" means influencing or attempting to influence the selection, nomination, election, or appointment of any individual to any federal, state, or local public office. An SSF is not required to apply to the IRS for recognition of its exemption from federal tax.

Federal law does not require any specific form of organization for an SSF, and it does not require that an SSF manage its affairs by the terms of bylaws or other formal organizing documents. In this sense, SSFs have a wide range of organizational options available to them. Some SSFs authorize the treasurer to make virtually all major decisions. Other SSFs operate under more complicated arrangements for making these decisions, such as the use of an executive committee that draws on the participation of leaders in the connected 501(c)(4) organization to make contribution and other operating decisions.

2. Employer Identification Number

The SSF must apply for an employer identification number (EIN) by filing a Form SS-4 with the IRS. The SSF may not use the EIN of its connected 501(c)(4) if it wishes to have a separate legal identity from the 501(c)(4). Generally, a bank will not open an account until the SSF has obtained an EIN. This step must be taken even if the SSF will not have any employees of its own. The IRS online Form SS-4 (Application for EIN) can be found online at <http://www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id=102767,00.html>.

All fundraising solicitations for SSFs must remind potential donors that contributions to these organizations are not tax-deductible.

3. Depository

The SSF must open a bank account(s) into which all funds must be deposited and from which all expenditures must be made. It is impermissible for any SSF to receive and spend funds without first depositing them in the depository account.

4. Fundraising

All fundraising solicitations for SSFs must remind potential donors that contributions to these organizations are not tax-deductible. (See the disclaimer requirements in Chapter II, § (D)(7).)

It may be possible for a 501(c)(4) organization to transfer funds to an SSF that is not a Federal PAC, as long as the transfers are made “promptly and directly.”² If the transfer is not made “promptly and directly,” the amounts transferred will be considered exempt function expenditures (expenditures for political activity) subject to tax under IRC section 527. The rules governing these transfers, summarized briefly below, are very complex and require careful attention.

- The transfer procedures must be made in accordance with applicable state and federal law.
- The 501(c) organization must maintain adequate records to demonstrate that the transfer was made up of dues or political contributions, not investment income.
- The dues or contributions may not be used to generate investment income for the 501(c) organization. This requirement prevents the organization from holding funds for a significant period of time in an interest-bearing account and transferring them to the SSF. For this reason, many organizations choose to use non-interest-bearing accounts to collect dues and contributions. If an interest-bearing account is used, the transfers must be made “promptly.” The IRS ruled informally that funds were transferred “promptly” when the transfers were made once or twice a month.³

The FECA, applicable to all Traditional PACs and Super PACs, has many additional rules and requirements for fundraising discussed in Section B of this Chapter. State law varies and must be consulted to determine if a 501(c)(4) may transfer funds and, if so, the applicable rules.

5. Tax Returns

Certain SSFs must file Form 990 or Form 990-EZ, depending on their registration and revenue. All Federal PACs and Super PACs are exempt from these filings. For SSFs that are not registered with the FEC, the filing requirements depend on whether or not the committee is a qualified state or local political organization (QSLPO), meaning that it is registered and reports in a state whose law requires disclosure of all contributors who donate at least $500 per year to the PAC and of all entities that receive at least $800 per year of its spending. QSLPOs must file Form 990 or Form 990-EZ only if the committee has gross receipts of $100,000 or more. Non-QSLPO committees must file Form 990 or Form 990-EZ if their gross receipts are $25,000 or more. No section 527 political organizations (including both QSLPOs and non-QSLPOs) are required to file a Form 990-N. Additional information on Form 990 filing requirements may be found at <http://www.irs.gov/charities/political/article/0,,id=163097,00.html>.

Forms 990 and 990-EZ are due on the fifteenth day of the fifth month after the close of an organization’s tax year. An organization may obtain an automatic three-month extension on its Form 990 or 990-EZ by filing Form 8868 prior to the date on which its Form 990 or 990-EZ is due.

The SSF must also file a tax return (Form 1120-POL, “Income Tax Return for Certain Political Organizations”) on the fifteenth day of the third month after the end of the tax year if it has investment income (including interest or dividends) or nonexempt function expenditures in excess of $100 during the tax year. The due date for an SSF with a tax year ending December 31 is March 15. There may be similar state filing requirements.

B. ESTABLISHING AN SSF THAT IS A FEDERAL PAC

Throughout this section, the term “SSF Federal PAC” is used to discuss Traditional PACs. If a Super PAC is formed as an SSF, many of the rules will be the same. In cases where there are different rules, those differences are noted.

1. Registering With the Federal Election Commission

An SSF Federal PAC must register with the FEC by filing a Statement of Organization (FEC Form 1) within 10 days of any action by the connected organization toward establishing it, including passage of a resolution by the board of directors of a 501(c)(4) authorizing the establishment of an SSF. This form requires certain basic information, including the formal name of the committee, the name and location of its bank, the name of its treasurer, and the custodian of its records. It does not matter whether the new SSF has raised any money. As long as the connected organization has authorized raising money, it must register.

Although the same form is used to register either an SSF Federal PAC or a Nonconnected Federal PAC, there are differences in how the form should be completed for each type of entity. These differences are highlighted below.

Filling Out the Statement of Organization (See Chapter 5 for special rules for Super PACs.)
	SSF Federal PAC	Nonconnected Federal PAC
1. Full name and address of Federal PAC	Must include the full name of the sponsoring corporation; address may be a post office box	No federal rules on naming a nonconnected committee
2. Date	The date on which the Statement of Organization is submitted to FEC
3. Amendment	Because this is the initial filing and not an amendment to a previous filing, check “no” box
4. Type of Committee	Check box (e) (“This committee is a separate segregated fund”); the committee must indicate whether or not it is a lobbyist/registrant PAC.	Check box (f) if the committee plans to support or oppose more than one federal candidate
5. Connected Organization/ Affiliated Committees	The connected organization is the corporation setting up the SSF; affiliated committees are any Federal PACs established by the parent or subsidiaries of the parent. The box for “corporation” should be checked under the larger box.	Generally no, unless the committee is affiliated with another registered political action committee; generally, committees are affiliated when they are established, financed, maintained, and controlled by the same person or organization.
6. Custodian of Records	Usually the PAC treasurer, although some organizations use an outside accountant for this purpose
7. Treasurer	Anyone, including a nonemployee or an officer of the connected organization; the appointment of an assistant treasurer is advisable in the event that the treasurer is not available. (See § C(4) of this chapter for discussion of the treasurer’s legal liability.)
8. Depository	The bank or other financial institution in which the PAC deposits its funds; it is not necessary to list multiple accounts in the same bank.

2. Name of the Committee

The official name of the SSF Federal PAC must include the full name of its connected organization. A shortened form of the official name may be used on letterhead or checks, provided that the short name includes a clearly recognizable abbreviated form or acronym.

Example:

If the PEN Board decides to set up a Federal PAC, the name of the new organization cannot simply be “Political Action Committee” or “Good Government Fund.” The official name must be “Protect the Environment Now Political Action Committee.” The PAC may indicate on its Statement of Organization that it will use PENPAC as a well-known abbreviation, but that cannot be the official name.

3. Affiliation of SSF Federal PACs

All SSF Federal PACs established, financed, maintained, or controlled by different parts of the same organization are considered to be affiliated. Thus, SSF Federal PACs established by regional or state groups or chapters of the same 501(c)(4) organization are affiliated with the parent’s Federal PAC. However, some local organizations are only loosely associated with a national organization, and therefore their SSF Federal PACs may not be considered affiliated. To determine whether your organization is affiliated with another organization, it is wise to consult an attorney.

Under certain circumstances, Federal PACs not established by the same parent may be considered affiliated. The FEC looks at the following factors, among others, to determine affiliation: similar patterns of contributions; large transfers of money from one organization to another; or “common control,” such as control by one Federal PAC or its connected 501(c)(4) over another PAC’s decision-making authority.

The consequences of affiliation are important. Affiliated committees share a single limitation on contributions to federal candidates. Thus, if a multicandidate parent SSF Federal PAC contributes $4,500 to a particular federal candidate for an election, any affiliated Federal PACs would be collectively limited to contributing only an additional $500 to the same candidate for the same election. Affiliated committees also share common limits on the contributions that they receive from the same donor. (See Chapter V regarding affiliation rules and Super PACs.)

4. Committee Officers

Federal law requires an SSF Federal PAC to name only one officer, a treasurer. The treasurer is responsible for processing all PAC receipts, authorizing contributions and expenditures by the PAC, maintaining PAC books and records, and seeing to the preparation and timely filing of accurate financial disclosure reports with the FEC. A custodian of records must also be designated. This role may be filled by the treasurer or another person responsible for day-to-day recordkeeping.

The treasurer may delegate day-to-day accounting and reporting responsibilities to another person. However, the treasurer remains the responsible party for purposes of federal law. Without a treasurer, an SSF Federal PAC may not accept contributions or make expenditures. These PACs are advised to avoid the occurrence of any such vacancy by providing for one or more assistant treasurers who can automatically assume the position of treasurer if the treasurer is unavailable for some reason.

The decision to name any other officers, such as a chairman or executive officer, is completely within the discretion of the connected organization or the SSF Federal PAC itself. Appointment of other officers does not relieve the treasurer of any responsibility.

5. Depository

The bank account for an SSF Federal PAC may be in any national or state bank or federally insured credit union or savings and loan. The PACs may have as many depositories, and as many accounts in each depository, as needed. The accounts in the same bank do not need to be listed separately on the Statement of Organization.

Example:

PENPAC was established to conduct express advocacy activities in federal elections. The PEN board met and passed a resolution to organize PENPAC. A bank account was opened for the PAC. No corporate money (i.e., PEN funds) may be deposited in the account. The funds must be raised for the specific purpose of supporting the PAC and deposited in the PAC account. PEN decides to appoint four volunteers, including one of the PEN Board members, to direct the PAC's activities.

6. 501(c)(4) Support for an SSF Federal PAC

It is important to note that the rules on corporate support for a Super PAC, discussed in Chapter V, differ from those discussed below.

A 501(c)(4) may pay the administrative and fundraising costs of its SSF Federal PAC, or the SSF may pay some or all of these costs directly.⁴ The 501(c)(4) may, for example, pay all the costs for office space, staff, telephones, office supplies, and legal and accounting services. Staff of the 501(c)(4) may work on administrative activities of the SSF Federal PAC or Super PAC without allocating the salary among other 501(c)(4) activities and the SSF. Similarly, the 501(c)(4) may absorb all other costs of the SSF's administration. These costs may be considered exempt function expenses and therefore count against the primary purpose of the connected 501(c)(4). In addition, the costs must be reported on the Form 990 of the connected 501(c)(4). (See Chapter I, § C(5).) They are not, however, subject to section 527(f) tax because they are covered under the reserved section of the regulations.⁵

In the event that the SSF Federal PAC pays any administrative cost that is payable by the 501(c)(4), it may seek reimbursement from the 501(c)(4), provided that the reimbursement is made within 30 days of the original payment by the SSF.⁶ Apart from such reimbursements, the 501(c)(4) may not give money to the SSF Federal PAC for administrative or any other purposes. All payments for the benefit of the SSF must be made directly by the 501(c)(4) to the vendors or suppliers of services, provided "in-kind" by the 501(c)(4) itself or made as reimbursements to the SSF within 30 days.

The 501(c)(4) may not lend funds to the SSF Federal PAC. Federal law expressly prohibits such loans.⁷

The SSF Federal PAC may pay for 501(c)(4) activities, but this must be done carefully. If the expenditure is not clearly for the purpose of influencing an election, it may be taxable under the Internal Revenue Code. For example, if the SSF Federal PAC pays for a lobbying workshop, it may be subject to tax on that expenditure.

If the SSF Federal PAC wants to use any resources of the 501(c)(4) organization to make an in-kind contribution to a federal candidate, Federal PAC, or political party, the fair market value of the resources must be paid in advance by the SSF Federal PAC to the 501(c)(4).⁸ Otherwise the 501(c)(4) will be considered to have made a prohibited corporate contribution. The SSF Federal PAC may advance a specific amount to cover a particular use of corporate resources, or it may advance of a lump sum to cover multiple uses that it anticipates in the future.

Example:

PENPAC pays its share of the monthly rent and the costs of a PAC meeting to decide on endorsements and next year's agenda. PENPAC may seek reimbursement from PEN and deposit the reimbursement in the PENPAC account within 30 days. A deposit of PEN funds into the PENPAC account under any other circumstances would violate the FECA.

7. Fundraising Rules for an SSF Federal PAC

A 501(c)(4) corporation establishing an SSF Federal PAC may solicit contributions to the SSF only from its executive and administrative personnel and their families.⁹ In addition, if the 501(c)(4) has "members," contributions may be solicited from these members and their families. (See below for a discussion of the meaning of "member" in this context.) If the connected 501(c)(4) has an affiliated 501(c)(3) membership organization, it may be possible for the SSF to solicit the members of the 501(c)(3) for contributions to the SSF.¹⁰ The 501(c)(3) may not pay any of the costs of the solicitation and must take steps to ensure that it does not jeopardize its charitable status.

An SSF may not solicit or receive contributions from foreign nationals. A foreign national is a person who is not a U.S. citizen and does not have a "green card" to work in the United States.

Example:

PENPAC decides to contribute the services of a PEN employee to Smith for Congress; PENPAC must pay in advance the estimated cost of the employee's salary and benefits to PEN. Alternatively, if PENPAC anticipates that it will be making additional in-kind contributions of staff services worth approximately $5,000 to Smith and other candidates, PENPAC may advance $5,000 to PEN and draw down on that advance as the funds are expended. If an advance payment is not made, but instead PEN is reimbursed after the expenditure, PEN has made a prohibited corporate contribution.

Under certain limited circumstances, a 501(c)(4) may also solicit contributions from nonexecutive or nonadministrative employees. All other potentially interested donors, such as members of the general public, may not be approached for contributions. Any solicitation outside of this permissible class violates federal law.

All fundraising solicitations for the SSF Federal PAC must include language informing the prospective contributor of the political purposes of the SSF, that all contributions are voluntary and the contributor has the right to refuse to contribute without reprisal, and that any suggested amounts listed on the solicitation are merely suggestions and more or less that the suggested amounts may be given.¹¹ A PAC solicitation does not require a disclaimer. It must, however, include a notice that contributions are not tax deductible.

An individual may contribute up to $5,000 per calendar year to an SSF Federal PAC.

a. Who Is a Member?

A member, under federal election law, is an individual who has an enduring financial or organizational connection to the 501(c)(4) organization.¹² Individuals who have only a casual or honorific connection to the organization are not members. Generally the FEC has interpreted the term "member" to apply to any person who either pays membership dues on at least an annual basis or has a significant organizational attachment.¹³

Individuals must affirmatively accept membership by some action, such as checking a box stating their intention to be members. The affirmation could be satisfied if the member returns a mailed questionnaire or attends an organizational meeting.¹⁴

Annual Dues. Individuals who pay dues at least annually meet the definition of a member.¹⁵ The FEC did not set any minimum amount for dues, allowing organizations to establish their own dues. Because some individuals fail to renew their dues exactly 12 months after the date of their last payment, the FEC offers organizations flexibility in satisfying this provision, as long as members renew their dues within “a reasonable grace period.”¹⁶

Organizational Attachment. Individuals may also be considered members if they have the right to participate directly in organizational governance.¹⁷ This right involves the ability to vote, directly or indirectly, in elections of members for the organization’s highest governing board or on policy questions that are binding on that board.

Example:

A member of PEN must pay dues of at least $15 per year. An individual paying these dues qualifies as a member under the FECA and may be solicited by the PAC. PEN also maintains an extensive list of names of people who have written to the organization for information or have had some similar type of contact. These individuals are not PEN members and may not be solicited by the PAC for contributions.

Membership organizations must also satisfy certain requirements:

- some or all of the members must have the power to operate the organization, pursuant to its bylaws or other formal organizational documents;
- membership requirements must be expressly stated in bylaws or other formal organizational documents;
- bylaws or other formal organizational documents must be made available to members;
- the organization must expressly solicit people to become members;
- the organization must expressly acknowledge membership acceptance, such as by sending a membership card or newsletter to the member; and
- the organization may not be organized primarily for the purpose of influencing elections.¹⁸

b. What Is a Solicitation?

The FEC has broadly defined the term “solicitation” to encompass almost any oral or written presentation that encourages giving. Solicitation is not just an outright request for funds. The FEC has held, for example, that a newsletter circulated by a connected organization includes a solicitation if it publishes an article about its PAC that promotes the importance of giving and clearly states how people wishing to contribute can do so.¹⁹ The sale of items, such as T-shirts or posters, by a Federal PAC is also considered a solicitation.

While an SSF Federal PAC may lawfully accept unsolicited contributions from those outside its solicitable class, publicizing the PAC’s right to accept these contributions is itself a solicitation. It is extremely important, therefore, for the connected organization to evaluate carefully any discussion of its SSF in communications directed beyond its membership or executive and administrative personnel and their families to the public at large. These communications could be deemed impermissible solicitations.

All contributions to a Federal PAC must be voluntary. An organization may not, therefore, automatically assess members a political contribution as part of their regular payment of dues. Federal PAC contributions may not be required as a condition of membership. Any contribution guidelines must be simply suggestions, and potential contributors must be informed of their right to refuse to contribute without negative consequences and of their right to contribute more or less than any suggested amount.

All contributions to a Federal PAC must be voluntary.

8. Accounting and Reporting Responsibilities for Federal PACs

All Federal PACs are required to keep records of their financial affairs and to make substantial disclosure of those affairs on a periodic basis to the FEC.²⁰ Political committees must file reports on FEC Form 3X, showing all receipts and disbursements and all outstanding debts and obligations. Receipts include contributions from individuals or other political committees, proceeds of loans received, rebates, and refunds. Disbursements include operating expenditures (if not paid by the connected organization), contributions to federal candidates, and loan repayments. In addition to summary information, the report requires detailed itemization of certain information, such as contributions from individuals and payments to a single vendor that, in the aggregate, exceed $200. For all contributions of more than $50 to the Federal PAC, the committee must retain a full-size photocopy or a digital image of the check.²¹ No cash contributions in excess of $100 may be accepted. The treasurer must preserve all records and accounts required under the regulations for three years after the report to which the records relate is filed.²²

a. Filing Deadlines for FEC Reports

A Federal PAC may choose to file on either a quarterly or monthly basis.

Quarterly reporting. If the Federal PAC chooses to file quarterly, reports during a federal election year must be filed by April 15, July 15, and October 15, with the fourth quarterly or “year-end” report due on January 31 of the following year. In addition, the PAC must file a pre-election report 12 days before any election in which the Federal PAC or Super PAC has made contributions or expenditures not previously reported. Finally, the Federal PAC and Super PAC must file a post-general election report 30 days after the general election. There is no requirement for any post-primary election report.

During a nonelection year, a Federal PAC on a quarterly schedule must file only two semiannual reports covering January through June (to be filed by July 31) and covering July through December (to be filed by January 31 of the following year). In addition to these regularly scheduled reports, a PAC may also be required to file reports in connection with special and primary elections.

Monthly reporting. Monthly filing involves the filing of a report on the 20th day after the last day of each month during the period from January through September. For the last three months of an election year, in place of the monthly report, the Federal PAC must file the pre- and post-general election reports and year-end reports as described above under quarterly filings. Monthly filing is advantageous if the Federal PAC is planning to support candidates in numerous primary elections or in any special election around the country because monthly filing obviates the need to track the coverage dates and deadlines for pre-primary election reports.

In a nonelection year, a Federal PAC filing monthly files a report by the 20th day after the last day of each month, except for the year-end report covering the month of December, which is due on January 31 of the next year.

In the case of a Federal PAC that has receipts or expenditures (or anticipates having receipts or expenditures) in a calendar year in excess of $50,000, FEC reports must be filed electronically on or before the date when they are due. All other filers may file reports on or postmarked by the date on which they are due. If mailed, the reports should be sent by certified or registered mail, express mail, or overnight delivery service with a delivery confirmation so as to have proof of filing.²³ Pre-election reports must be filed on the due date or postmarked on an earlier date specified by the FEC. The FEC takes the position that it cannot waive or extend reporting deadlines, and it strictly monitors filing dates. A late filer may be subject to a civil penalty.

b. Expenditures Must Be Documented

All Federal PACs must keep detailed documentation of all expenditures, including the name and address of the recipient of each disbursement; its date, amount and purpose; and (if the disbursement is made for a candidate) the candidate's name and office sought.²⁴ For all expenditures over $200, it must save a hard copy of the canceled check, invoice or receipt; for credit card transactions, the PAC must keep the canceled check used to pay the credit card bill, plus either the monthly billing statement or the customer receipt for each transaction. These records must be maintained for three years from the date of the report of the underlying contribution and expenditure.

c. Obtaining Contributor Information

The treasurer of a Federal PAC must exercise its "best efforts" in compiling the information necessary to itemize individual contributions aggregated in excess of $200 per calendar year. All written solicitations must include a "clear request" for contributor information. The request must be easy to read and clearly visible, and it must include a statement that federal law requires the PAC to use its best efforts to collect and report the name, address, occupation, and employer of all individuals whose contributions exceed $200 per year. The FEC suggests two statements that meet this requirement, but similar language is acceptable:

- "Federal law requires us to use our best efforts to collect and report the name, mailing address, occupation, and name of employer of individuals whose contributions exceed $200 in a calendar year"; or
- "To comply with federal law, we must use best efforts to obtain, maintain, and submit the name, mailing address, occupation, and name of employer of individuals whose contributions exceed $200 per calendar year."²⁵

Where a contributor fails to provide this information, the treasurer must make at least one written or oral request for this information within 30 days of receipt of the contribution. The additional request may not include any other subject or solicitation and must include a preaddressed return postcard or envelope. The information acquired must be reported in the same election cycle, either on the next FEC report or through amending the report on which the contribution was originally reported. Repeated failure to obtain this information from contributors can result in liability for reporting violations and a civil penalty. Federal PACs should keep records of its requests for this information.

An SSF Federal PAC must report any contributor information that is available in the records of its connected organization. Therefore, if the 501(c)(4) has the address, occupation, or employer information in its records, independent of the SSF solicitation, that information must be used in the FEC report.

Note that there is a difference between the recordkeeping and reporting requirements of the FECA. For example, individual contributors are disclosed by name and with accompanying details on FEC reports only if their aggregate contributions exceed $200 in any year, but the Federal PAC must maintain complete records of the names and addresses of each contributor who has donated in excess of $50.²⁶

Records must be maintained for three years from the date of the report of the underlying contribution and expenditure.

The fair market value of all in-kind contributions made by the SSF Federal PAC must be disclosed.

d. Reporting “In-Kind” Contributions (Traditional PACs Only)

The fair market value of all in-kind contributions (donations of goods or services in lieu of cash) made by the SSF Federal PAC must be disclosed. Therefore, if the committee contributes its mailing list to a candidate, the fair market value of the list must be disclosed and counts against the contribution limit to that candidate. Similarly, if the PAC coordinates with a candidate on the production and broadcast of a radio ad advocating the election of that candidate, all the costs of the ad are considered in-kind contributions and must be disclosed.

These costs count against the SSF Federal PAC’s contribution limit to that candidate. The SSF Federal PAC must also notify the candidate benefiting from the in-kind contribution of the nature, amount, and date of the contribution.

In-kind contributions received by a Federal PAC are disclosed both as a receipt and as an expenditure on the FEC report so that the value of the in-kind contribution does not affect the cash balance of the PAC.

Super PACs are not permitted to make contributions in federal races, so the rules on in-kind contributions to candidates do not apply.

e. Contribution Limits from PACs to Candidates (Traditional PACs Only)

SSF Federal PACs are limited in the value of money or in-kind contributions that they may make to candidates. Super PACs may not make contributions to candidates, so the guidance in this section applies only to Traditional PACs.

A Federal PAC that has been registered with the FEC for more than six months, has received contributions for federal elections from more than 50 people, and has contributed to at least five candidates qualifies for multicandidate committee status and may contribute up to $5,000 to each candidate per election (i.e., $5,000 for the primary election plus $5,000 for the general election). These limits are not indexed currently to inflation.²⁷ Traditional Federal PACs that are not multicandidate committees are limited to $2,500 per candidate per election.²⁸ Certain limits, including the $2,500 limit above, are indexed for inflation in odd-numbered years.

Within 10 days of qualifying as a multicandidate committee, a Traditional PAC must also notify the FEC by filing a Form 1M, “Notification of Multicandidate Status.”²⁹ It must also notify each recipient of a contribution of its status.³⁰ Most committees comply with this requirement by printing the words, “XYZ PAC has qualified as a multicandidate committee,” on the PAC’s checks. For this reason, you may wish to order only a limited number of preprinted checks during the first six months of the PAC’s existence. The information may also be stated in a cover letter that accompanies any contribution.

Since federal contribution limits are calculated on a per-election basis, the specific election for which a contribution is made should be clearly indicated on the face of the check or in an accompanying letter. It also is essential to indicate accurately on the report whether the contribution is for the primary or the general election. Errors in this area could create the appearance that contribution limitations for a particular election have been violated when, in fact, they have not.

C. STATE OR LOCAL ACTIVITY BY FEDERAL PACS

If a Federal PAC intends to conduct state or local political activity from the same account as its federal activity, it must disclose these expenditures on its reports to the FEC. It will also be required to comply with state and local registration and reporting requirements. Some states permit Federal PACs to make contributions to state and local candidates with minimal if any reporting requirements, while others require the formation of separate State PACs.

Because state laws vary widely, it is advisable to consult with counsel prior to using a Federal PAC for state or local activity. Generally the secretary of state oversees the regulation of these activities, and forms are available from that office. For information on state campaign finance laws, see <http://www.afj.org/for-nonprofits-foundations/state-law-resources.html> and the websites of the Secretary of State or other campaign finance board.

D. ESTABLISHING AN SSF THAT IS NOT REGISTERED WITH THE FEC

The following information applies only to SSFs that are not registered with the FEC.

1. Registration with the Internal Revenue Service

An SSF that is not a Federal PAC or a Super PAC and that reasonably anticipates raising or spending $25,000 or more in a calendar year must register with the IRS within 24 hours after the date on which the organization is established. The 24-hour period is triggered by any one of the following events: obtaining an employer identification number, incorporation of the SSF under state law, approval of articles of association by the board of directors, or the opening of a bank account. The SSF must file Form 8871 (“Notice of SSF Status”) electronically with the IRS. (The link to the electronic filing site is <https://forms.irs.gov/politicalOrgs/login/887xLogin.jsp?ck>, and the instructions for Form 8871 are at <http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/i887>.) This form requires certain basic information, including the name and address of the SSF, date of its establishment, custodian of records, exempt purpose, related entities (which would include the name of the connected organization), and a list of all directors, officers, and highly compensated employees.

The IRS will mail to the SSF a username and password. This will be necessary for electronically amending the Form 8871 or filing periodic reports. (See “Reporting Requirements” below.) An SSF must electronically file notice (an amended Form 8871) of any “material change” to the information on its Form 8871 within 30 days of the material change. A change of address, directors, or bank account would constitute a material change.

Because state laws vary widely, it is advisable to consult with counsel prior to using a Federal PAC for state or local activity.

2. Reporting Requirements

Periodic reporting is required by the IRS for political organizations that do not report contributions and expenditures to the FEC. An SSF that is required to register with the IRS and does not meet the requirements of a qualified state or local political organization (QSLPO) must file periodic reports with the IRS using Form 8872 (“Political Organization Report of Contributions and Expenditures, available at <http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/f8872.pdf>. Instructions are available at <http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/i8872.pdf>).

In order to be a QSLPO, a group must meet the following criteria:³¹

- all of the political organization’s exempt function activities are solely for the purposes of influencing state or local elections;
- the political organization is required, under state law, to submit to the appropriate state agency the same information regarding its contributions and expenditures that the political organization would be required to report to the IRS on Form 8872;
- the state agency to which the political organization reports makes the information available to the public, and the organization itself makes the reports publically available upon request; and
- no federal candidate or federal officeholder is involved in the direction or fundraising efforts of the political organization.

For an SSF that is not a QSLPO, Form 8872 requires disclosure of aggregate contributions received and disbursements paid, and detailed information is required for contributions and expenditures.³² Once the Form 8871 has been filed, the Form 8872 must be filed even if there is no activity. An organization must file Form 8872 electronically if it has, or expects to have, contributions or expenditures exceeding $50,000 for the calendar year. No extensions may be granted for filing these reports.

Quarterly reports. If the SSF chooses to file quarterly, reports during an election year (i.e., an even-numbered year) must be filed by April 15, July 15, and October 15, with the fourth quarterly or “year-end” report due on January 31 of the following year. In addition to these reports, the SSF must file a pre-election report 12 days before an election (primary or general) for which it has made contributions or expenditures not previously reported in connection with that particular election. Finally, the SSF must file a post-general election report 30 days after the general election. (There is no requirement for any post-primary election report.)

During a nonelection year (i.e., an odd-numbered year), an SSF on a quarterly schedule must file only two semiannual reports covering January through June (to be filed by July 31) and covering July through December (to be filed by January 31 of the following year).

Monthly reports. Monthly filing requires the filing of a report on the 20th day after the last day of each month during the period from January through September. For the last three months of an election year, in place of the monthly report, the SSF must file the pre- and post-general election reports and year-end reports as described above under “Quarterly Filings.” Monthly filing is advantageous if the SSF plans to support candidates in numerous primary elections around the country, because monthly filing avoids the need to track the coverage dates and deadlines for pre-primary election reports.

In a nonelection year, an SSF filing monthly files a report by the 20th day after the last day of each month, except for the year-end report covering the month of December, which is due on January 31 of the next year.

3. Obtaining Contributor Information

An SSF must itemize contributions of $200 or more in the aggregate from any one contributor and aggregate expenditures of $500 or more. Therefore, it is advisable that an SSF request the name, address, and (if the contributor is an individual) occupation and employer of a contributor in all its solicitations. Similarly, this information must be requested of any entity or individual to whom the organization makes aggregate payments of $500 or more in a calendar year.

4. Fundraising Activities

An SSF that is not registered with the FEC or equivalent state agency is relatively unrestricted with regard to the source and amount of contributions that it may solicit and receive. While an unregistered SSF is generally permitted to accept unlimited contributions from individuals (although not from foreign nationals), corporations, or labor unions, there may be special circumstances that restrict the receipt of certain contributions.

Individuals who make contributions to any political organization exempt under IRC section 527, such as an SSF, should be aware that:

- they may not deduct these amounts as charitable contributions for federal or state income tax purposes;³³
- such contributions are not subject to the federal gift tax;³⁴ and
- contributors of stock and other appreciated property must pay income tax on any unrealized gains that they have at the time of the gift.³⁵

CHAPTER V. SPECIAL RULES FOR ESTABLISHING AND OPERATING A SUPER PAC THAT IS A NONCONNECTED COMMITTEE

A. BACKGROUND ON SUPER PACS

The decision in SpeechNow.org v. FEC held that the First Amendment precludes governmental limits on contributions by individuals to political organizations that exclusively undertake “independent expenditures.” Until SpeechNow.org, an individual could contribute only $5,000 per year to a Federal PAC regardless of the kinds of political activities in which the PAC engaged, and individuals were limited to contributing $117,000 overall to all Federal PACs, candidates, and political parties during a two-year election cycle. Now no limits apply to contributions to Federal PACs that do not make contributions but engage only in independent expenditures and other public communications. A Super PAC may receive corporate and labor union contributions but is subject to the prohibitions on contributions from foreign nationals, national banks, and federal contractors.¹

As discussed in previous Chapters, Super PACs are required to comply with many of the same rules applicable to all Federal PACs, including registration (see Chapter IV, § B(2) and below), recordkeeping and reporting (see Chapter IV, § B(8)), disclaimers (see Chapter I, § D(7)) and coordination (see Chapter I, § E). There remain, however, many unanswered questions about the organization and operation of Super PACs.

B. SUPER PAC STRUCTURE

A Super PAC may be formed as a Nonconnected Federal PAC. While it is likely that a Super PAC may be an SSF, at the time of publication, there is not definitive guidance on this issue.² To date, the judicial opinions and FEC Advisory Opinions regarding Super PACs have addressed Nonconnected Federal PACs, not SSFs. The FEC has been asked to review a proposed Super PAC established as an SSF of a nonprofit corporation. The Commission, however, was unable to obtain the necessary four affirmative votes to issue a favorable opinion. The key issues on which the Commission was divided are whether the Super PAC could solicit contributions from persons outside of its solicitable class and how to treat the payment by the corporation of administrative and fundraising costs. As long as a Super PAC does not solicit contributions from outside of its solicitable class, there does not appear to be a valid rationale to bar SSF status.

Even in the case of a Super PAC that is organized by a 501(c)(4) and shares officers, office space and staff, there is an alternative approach to forming an SSF that has received FEC approval. The advantage to the nonconnected structure is that the Super PAC is not limited to funding from its restricted class. Instead it may solicit contributions from the general public, as well as corporations, labor unions, and other federally-permissible sources.

The FEC advised the Club for Growth (“CFG”) that it may establish and administer a Nonconnected Super PAC with the same treasurer (who also is the CFG’s president) as its traditional PAC.³ Under this opinion, CFG was permitted to solicit any individual to contribute to the Super PAC regardless of whether the person was a member of CFG’s solicitable class. The FEC advised CFG that it could solicit beyond CFG’s restricted class and that CFG would not be treated as an SSF. CFG could pay the PAC’s administrative and fundraising costs with those costs treated as lawful (and unlimited) in-kind contributions by CFG to the PAC and reported as such. In contrast, the administrative and fundraising costs of an SSF Federal PAC may be paid by its connected organization, and those payments are not “contributions” under FECA.

The payment of administrative and fundraising costs by a corporation for a Nonconnected Super PAC raises an unresolved question regarding the tax treatment of these expenditures under IRC section 527(f). There is currently no tax liability if a section 501(c) organization pays for certain expenses explicitly permitted by FECA, such as partisan engagement with the group's own members and establishing, administering and fundraising for an SSF. The regulations provide that these are expenditures for an exempt function only to the extent provided in the regulations.⁴ The specific regulation covering these expenses, however, is "reserved" and no final decision has ever been made on their treatment. Therefore, while these amounts must be counted in determining the organization's primary purpose, they are not subject to tax if paid by a connected organization for its SSF. If the Super PAC is established as a Nonconnected PAC, however, it is not clear whether the amounts expended by the 501(c)(4) organization in support of the PAC, which are treated as "contributions" to the PAC, would be covered by the reserved section of the regulations or treated as taxable under IRC section 527(f).

Pursuant to a Stipulated Order between National Defense PAC and the FEC, a Nonconnected Federal PAC may maintain two separate bank accounts: one to receive unlimited contributions for independent expenditures only, and another to receive contributions subject to the source and dollar limits applicable to a Traditional Federal PAC for the purpose of making candidate contributions.⁵ Each account must pay the portion of administrative expenses that represents the percentage of activity for that account, and it must comply with the applicable limits for the contributions that it receives for the purpose of making candidate contributions. Therefore, it is no longer necessary to have two separate PACs, one Traditional PAC and the other a Super PAC, as one Nonconnected Federal PAC registered with the FEC may have two accounts established for these separate activities. This order does not apply to SSFs.

C. ESTABLISHING AND REGISTERING A SUPER PAC

1. FEC Registration

A Super PAC is required to file Form 1 with the FEC within 10 days of raising or spending in excess of $1,000 with respect to federal elections. At least until Form 1 is revised, the FEC requests, but does not require, that, when a Super PAC files Form 1, it attach a letter informing the FEC that it is a Super PAC. The FEC has provided a recommended text for this purpose.⁶ Although this action is optional, it is advisable, because otherwise it is likely that the FEC will generate a form letter to the PAC after the PAC files its first financial report, asking the PAC for clarification on its status. For more information, see http://www.fec.gov/pdf/forms/ie_only_letter.pdf.

A Super PAC that is established as a Nonconnected PAC should not identify a "connected" organization on Line 6 of the Form 1, and the PAC should not be identified as a separate segregated fund (Line 5(f)). The Super PAC may, however, include in its name the name of any particular organization that was involved in starting or maintaining it. It appears that in that event the 501(c)(4) should license, for fair market value, to PAC the use of 501(c)(4) name within the PAC's name.

In the case of a Nonconnected PAC already registered as a Traditional PAC with the FEC that wishes to set up a Super PAC account, the PAC should notify the FEC Reports Analysis Division by letter or electronic submission (FEC Form 99) of the intention to start a Super PAC account. This account should use the same EIN and FEC Reporting Number as the Traditional PAC.

2. Employer Identification Number

The Super PAC, unless it is merely an account of an existing PAC, as discussed above, must apply for an employer identification number (EIN) by filing a Form SS-4 with the IRS. The Super PAC may not use the EIN of a connected 501(c)(4), if any, if it wishes to have a separate legal identity from the 501(c)(4). Generally, a bank will not open an account until the entity has obtained an EIN. This step must be taken even if the Super PAC will not have any employees of its own. The link to the IRS online Form SS-4 (Application for EIN) is <http://www.irs.gov/businesses/small/article/0,,id=102767,00.html>.

3. Depository

The Super PAC must open a bank account(s) into which all funds must be deposited and from which all expenditures must be made. It is impermissible for Super PAC to receive and spend funds without first depositing them in the depository account.

D. SPECIAL ACCOUNTING AND REPORTING RESPONSIBILITIES

In the case of a separately established Super PAC, the committee must report all of its receipts and disbursements pursuant to the Act and regulations in the same manner as any other federal political committee. (See Chapter IV, § B(8).)

There are special rules for a Federal PAC that maintains both a Traditional PAC account and a Super PAC account (called in FEC guidance a non-contribution account).⁷ In this case, reporting is somewhat more complicated, particularly because contributions received into the Super PAC account must be reported separately from contributions received into the Traditional PAC account. The FEC has instructed that contributions to the Super PAC account should be reported on Line 17 of Form 3X as “Other Federal Receipts,” rather than on Line 11(a), which continues to be used to report voluntary contributions to the Traditional PAC account. Contributions that must be itemized should be described on Schedule A in the memo entry as part of the “Non-Contribution Account.” Independent expenditures made from the Super PAC account should be reported on Line 24 of Form 3X and identified separately on Schedule E by entering “Non-Contribution Account” in the memo text. To the extent that the Federal PAC pays its own administrative or operating expenses, these disbursements should be allocated between the Super PAC account and the Traditional PAC account in a manner that corresponds to the percentage of activity from each account. The disbursements should be reported on Schedule B, Line 29 as “Other Disbursements” and identified in the memo text as for the “Non-Contribution Account.”

E. STATE ACTIVITY

A Super PAC may also make contributions to state and local candidates and undertake public communications about state and local elections insofar as state law permits. In this respect, a Super PAC is just like a Federal PAC. (For that reason, the commonly applied “Independent Expenditures Only PAC” label is somewhat misleading; it is more accurately termed a “no-federal-contributions PAC.”) Given varying state laws, however, it is essential to consult the law of the relevant state prior to using a Super PAC for state or local election activity.

Because Super PACs are a recent development in the law, it is important to consult counsel or knowledgeable sources regarding new rulings or guidance regarding establishing and operating Super PACs.

There are special rules for a Federal PAC that maintains both a Traditional PAC account and a Super PAC account.

CHAPTER VI. OPERATING A NONCONNECTED FEDERAL PAC THAT IS NOT A SUPER PAC

Individuals associated with a 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) may establish a Nonconnected Federal PAC,¹ which is a PAC established by an independent group of individuals, not by a corporation. The major benefit of a Nonconnected Federal PAC is that, unlike an SSF, it may solicit the general public for contributions. A Nonconnected Federal PAC may not be affiliated with another nonprofit corporation, such as a 501(c)(4), or any other corporate entity.² Staff, directors, or members of a 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4), as individuals, not as agents or members of the 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4), may form or serve on the board of a Nonconnected Federal PAC to support local, state, or federal candidates.

A Nonconnected Federal PAC must file its Statement of Organization with the FEC within 10 days of raising or spending $1,000.³ The process for creating a Nonconnected Federal PAC is similar in most respects to that for starting an SSF, with a few minor differences. (See Chapter IV.)

A 501(c)(3) or 501(c)(4) with which the individuals are associated may not provide any financial support, directly or indirectly, to the Nonconnected Federal PAC. Rather, all costs of organizing and operating the PAC must be paid from voluntary individual contributions to the PAC. This separation is particularly important in the case of a 501(c)(3) because a 501(c)(3) is strictly prohibited under tax law from having an affiliated political organization that supports or opposes candidates.

There is little clear guidance on the degree of separation required between a corporation and a Nonconnected Federal PAC to ensure that the PAC is treated as a Nonconnected committee. Numerous advisory opinions have considered the factors required to maintain separation between a corporation and a Nonconnected Federal PAC and have set out reasonably strict requirements for separation of governance, financial management, and activities. The recent opinions discussed in the previous chapter on Super PACs raise the question of whether the FEC's position has evolved in this respect. In two opinions issued to Nonconnected Super PACs, the only material difference between an SSF and a Nonconnected PAC is that in the case of the SSF the connected organization may pay, and not report to the FEC, the administrative and fundraising costs of the SSF. In contrast, the FEC's earlier opinions suggest that a greater degree of separation may be required for Nonconnected PACs that are not Super PACs, including diversified management and board members.

It is absolutely clear, however, that a corporation may not pay for any of the fundraising, administrative, or other overhead costs of a Nonconnected Traditional PAC. Financial transactions between an exempt organization or any other corporation and a Nonconnected Federal PAC should be kept to a minimum and must always be at arm's length.

In order to demonstrate separation, previous FEC advisory opinions suggest avoiding having the same persons managing both the Nonconnected Federal PAC and the exempt organization, or even to have a majority of overlapping directors. Individual board members or staff on their own time may serve on the board or as officers, but independence from the 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) is essential. The FEC has taken the position in one advisory opinion that the PAC should have a "diversified leadership" to avoid the situation in which individuals affiliated with a particular corporation form the majority of the PAC board.

A 501(c)(3) that has no affiliated 501(c)(4) and a Nonconnected Federal PAC should, in most cases, avoid sharing space, equipment, or staff. Any sharing of resources could invite IRS scrutiny into whether the 501(c)(3) is indirectly or directly supporting the PAC. If a 501(c) organization and Nonconnected Federal PAC share any staff, equipment, or office space, the PAC must pay fair market value for all of these resources in advance (for use of staff) or within a commercially reasonable time. The cost of any use of the corporation's lists by the PAC must be paid in advance.

Failing to maintain separation between a Nonconnected Federal PAC and a tax-exempt organization could convert the PAC into an SSF. If such an affiliation occurs, the Nonconnected Federal PAC would be subject to the restricted class fundraising and other restrictions of an SSF under federal law.

This guide does not attempt to cover the full range of rules applicable to Nonconnected Federal PACs, because it focuses primarily on the complex structures of affiliated organizations. CONCLUSION: PUTTING KNOWLEDGE INTO PRACTICE

While the details of the laws discussed in this guide can be quite complex, the essential idea is simple: nonprofit organizations may become involved in the policy process at every stage, and different organizational structures are available that enable nonprofit organizations to pursue almost any strategy for policy change. It is possible to ally with different types of nonprofit organizations to create effective coalitions for any type of social change. We hope that this guide has given you the information you need to bring your unique knowledge, vision, and commitment to the policy process and to succeed.

APPENDIX A: LOBBYING DISCLOSURE ACT

The Lobbying Disclosure Act of 1995 (LDA), as amended, requires registration and reporting by organizations employing lobbyists or by outside lobbyists who accept compensation for conducting lobbying activities on behalf of clients. The LDA applies to the lobbying of both the executive and legislative branches of the federal government. The Act also imposes significant civil and criminal penalties on lobbyists and lobbying organizations for violations of the disclosure requirements or of the congressional gift and travel rules.

BASIC REQUIREMENTS

An organization is required to register and report under the LDA if:

- it employs one or more “lobbyists,” and
- its total expenses for “lobbying activities” exceed or are expected to exceed $11,500 during a calendar quarter.

A lobbyist is defined as an individual who makes at least two “lobbying contacts” and spends at least 20 percent of his or her time for the organization in a quarterly reporting period on “lobbying activities.” Thus, an individual who is employed primarily to conduct research, and who occasionally accompanies the organization’s lobbyist to explain technical matters would probably not have to be registered as a lobbyist because he or she would generally not be spending 20 percent or more of his or her work time on lobbying.

LOBBYING CONTACTS VERSUS LOBBYING ACTIVITIES

A lobbying contact consists of:

- an oral or written communication (including an electronic communication);
- to an executive or legislative branch official;
- on behalf of a client; regarding:
 - » the formulation, modification, or adoption of federal legislation, federal rules, regulations, executive orders, and other government programs;
 - » the administration of federal programs (including the negotiation or award of contracts, grants, or licenses); or
 - » the nomination or confirmation of a person subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Lobbying activities include both lobbying contacts and all efforts in support of such contacts, including:

- preparation and planning activities;
- research and other background work intended for use in lobbying contacts; and
- coordination with the lobbying activities of others groups. (See special rules on coalitions below.)

Exempt contacts: Certain communications will not count as lobbying contacts for the purpose of determining who is a lobbyist. These include:

- requests for appointments, status requests, or similar administrative communications made without the intent to influence a covered official;
- communications made in the course of participation in an advisory committee subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act;
- testimony given before a committee, subcommittee, or task force of Congress, or submitted for inclusion in the public record of a congressional hearing;

- communications required by subpoena, civil investigative demand, or otherwise compelled by statute, regulation, or other action of Congress or a federal agency, including communications compelled by a federal contract, grant, loan, permit, or license;
- communications in response to a notice in the Federal Register, Commerce Business Daily, or other similar publication soliciting public comment;
- certain confidential communications, the unauthorized disclosure of which is prohibited by law;
- communications made to agency officials with regard to judicial proceedings, criminal or civil law enforcement inquiries, investigations or proceedings, or filings required by statute or regulation;
- communications made in compliance with written agency procedures regarding an adjudication conducted by the agency under Section 554 of Title 5, U.S. Code, or substantially similar provisions;
- written comments filed in a public docket and other communications made on the record in a public proceeding;
- formal petitions for agency action, made in writing pursuant to established agency procedures; and
- communications made on behalf of an individual with regard to said individual's benefits, employment, other personal matters involving only that individual, or disclosures by that individual pursuant to whistleblower statutes.

While the activities listed above will not trigger registration requirements for any employee, if these activities are pursued in support of the organization's other lobbying activities the expenses associated with these contacts must still be disclosed as lobbying activities.

REGISTRATION AND REPORTING

An organization that employs any individuals who meet the definition of a lobbyist must register with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House. (Identical forms must be filed in both locations.) The organization is the registrant, and its in-house lobbyists are to be named on the registration form.

Registration is required within 45 days of the date of employment of the lobbyist or by the date of the second lobbying contact, whichever is earlier. Following registration, the organization is required to file quarterly reports with the Secretary and the Clerk. Outside lobbyists or lobbying firms file their own registrations, in which they name their clients. Thus, a lobbying organization would not name its contract lobbyists on the company's registration, but it would include the cost of hiring those lobbyists in its estimate of lobbying expenses on its quarterly reports.

Registration form LD-1. A lobbying registration, filed electronically on Form LD-1, must identify:

- the name of the registrant;
- the registrant's client (in the case of a company lobbying on its own behalf, the client is the company itself);
- the effective date of registration;
- contact information for the registrant;
- any "affiliated organization" (i.e., any organization other than the client that contributes more than $5,000 in a calendar quarter for lobbying activities and actively participates in the planning, supervision, or control of such lobbying activities);

- any foreign entity that: (1) holds at least 20 percent equitable interest in the registrant or its client or any affiliated organization; (2) directly or indirectly, in whole or in major part, plans, supervises, controls, directs, finances, or subsidizes activities of the registrant or its client or any affiliated organization; or (3) is an affiliate of the registrant or its client or any affiliated organization and has a direct interest in the outcome of the lobbying activity;
- the general issues expected to be lobbied and, to the extent practicable, specific issues already addressed or likely to be addressed;
- each employee who has acted or is expected to act as a lobbyist on behalf of the client; and
- any employee who served as a covered executive or legislative branch official within 20 years of acting as a lobbyist for the client.

Quarterly reports: LD-2. Quarterly reports must be filed with the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House by January 20, April 20, July 20, and October 20 of each year. Note that reports must be filed even for periods in which a registrant had no lobbying activity. For such periods, the registrant simply marks a box indicating that he or she had no such activity in the reporting period.

Reports of lobbying activity, filed electronically on Form LD-2, must identify:

- the general lobbying issue areas and the specific issues lobbied (including bill numbers and references to specific executive branch actions);
- the names of employees who acted as lobbyists;
- a good-faith estimate of lobbying expenses, including payments to third parties (Estimates of amounts in excess of $5,000 may be rounded to the nearest $10,000. Where neither income nor expenses exceed $5,000, the form includes a box that must be checked so indicating);
- the chamber(s) of Congress and federal agencies contacted;
- updated information on any “affiliated organization” (see above); and
- updated information on any foreign entity (see above).

SEMIANNUAL REPORTING OF CERTAIN CONTRIBUTIONS

Registered lobbyists and their employers must now file semiannual reports disclosing certain contributions to federal candidates, political parties, and leadership PACs, as well as a broad range of payments to honor or recognize legislative and executive branch officials and donations to presidential libraries and inaugural committees. In addition, each filer must certify that he or she has read and understands the gift and travel provisions of the House and Senate rules and that he or she has not knowingly violated those rules. The LD-203 reports are due by July 30 and January 30 of each year, covering the periods of January 1 to June 30 and July 1 to December 31, respectively.

All individuals who are registered as lobbyists and their employing organizations or lobbying firms are subject to the reporting requirement. Registered lobbyists and their employers must file the LD-203, even if they did not make reportable payments and did not establish or control a PAC, since, in addition to those disclosure obligations, filers must certify that they understand and have complied with the gift and travel rules. A registered lobbyist whose registration was active during any part of a reporting period is subject to the reporting requirement regardless of whether or not the individual lobbyist engaged in any lobbying activity or terminated his or her registration during the reporting period.

Registered lobbyists and their employers must disclose to the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House semiannually the following types of activities, whether conducted by the organizations or individuals themselves or by a Federal PAC that they establish or control:

- contributions of at least $200 to federal candidates, political parties, or leadership PACs (defined as any Federal PAC that a federal officeholder or candidate has established, financed, maintained, or controlled, except for his or her official campaign committee and any political party committee);
- payments for an event to honor or recognize a legislative or executive branch official;
- payments to an entity that is named for a legislative branch official;
- payments to a person or entity in recognition of a legislative branch official;
- payments to an entity that is established, maintained, financed, or controlled by a legislative or executive branch official;
- payments to an entity that is designated by a legislative or executive branch official;
- payments for a meeting, retreat, conference, or similar event that is held by or in the name of a legislative or executive branch official; and
- donations of at least $200 to a presidential library foundation or presidential inaugural committee.

OTHER REQUIRED DISCLOSURES

Upon request of the official at the time of the contact, a person making an oral lobbying contact must disclose whether the lobbyist is registered and whether the client is a foreign entity. A person making a written lobbying contact must disclose any foreign entity on whose behalf the contact has been made.

APPENDIX B:

AGREEMENT FOR ALLOCATION OF COSTS AND REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES BETWEEN PROTECT THE ENVIRONMENT NOW EDUCATION FUND AND PROTECT THE ENVIRONMENT NOW

NOTE ON SAMPLE: This is a sample cost sharing agreement only and should not be relied upon as legal advice. Organizations should consult with their attorneys to receive guidance on specific rules governing their conduct and to develop an appropriate agreement.

Please be aware that a cost sharing agreement may be structured in a variety of ways. Under this model, the 501(c)(4) reimburses the 501(c)(3) for expenses paid on its behalf. It is also possible to have the 501(c)(3) reimburse the 501(c)(4) if this better suits your structure.

THIS AGREEMENT is made this 3rd day of July 2012, by and between Protect the Environment Now Education Fund ("FUND"), and Protect the Environment Now ("PEN").

WHEREAS, FUND is organized and operated for charitable and educational purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code ("Code"), including, but not limited to, conducting and distributing research, studies, and analysis related to environmental and economic issues; and

WHEREAS, PEN is organized and operated for social welfare purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(4) of the Code, including, but not limited to, developing and advocating legislation, regulations, and government programs to improve the environment, protect natural resources, and stimulate the economy; and

WHEREAS, FUND and PEN have agreed that it is in their mutual best interests to minimize duplicative expenses and to carry out their complimentary purposes in an economical and efficient manner, including the sharing of employees whose skills and knowledge will assist both organizations and the sharing of office space and equipment;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of these mutual promises and mutual benefits, FUND and PEN agree to share a variety of personnel, facilities, goods and services in accordance with the terms set forth below.

SECTION 1: SHARING OF PERSONNEL AND FACILITIES.

- 1.1 Personnel. FUND shall make available to PEN the services of its employees, to the extent they are not otherwise occupied in providing services for FUND, to perform a variety of administrative, program, financial, fundraising, and other similar functions for PEN on an as needed basis.
- 1.2 Equipment and Facilities. To the extent that the activities of PEN are and remain consistent with the overall purposes and goals of FUND, employees of FUND who are made available to PEN and employees and contractors hired directly by PEN, if any, may use office space, office supplies, office equipment and furniture, and similar items of FUND.

SECTION 2: METHOD OF PAYMENT.

- 2.1 Payment of Direct Costs. PEN shall pay FUND for all expenses incurred by FUND on PEN's behalf. Such expenses shall include, but are not limited to, salaries and fringe benefits of FUND personnel who perform services for or otherwise assist PEN in carrying out its purposes, fees to independent contractors, the costs of travel conducted by employees and contractors, postage, long-distance telephone charges, mileage, printing, and other actual expenses; provided, however, that PEN shall contract directly with vendors for the provision of such goods and services to the extent feasible.
- 2.2 Calculation of Payment for Salaries and Fringe Benefits. PEN's payment for services of FUND personnel shall be based on the proportion of the salaries and fringe benefits of FUND's personnel expended on PEN's functions, as determined in accordance with time-sheets or other reasonable documentation prepared by FUND's employees pursuant to instructions of management and agreed to by FUND and PEN.
- 2.3 Payment of Overhead Costs. PEN shall pay FUND an additional amount to cover overhead costs, which shall be calculated by multiplying FUND's total overhead costs by the percentage obtained by dividing the total staff hours charged to PEN's activities by the total staff hours worked by all FUND staff. The overhead items to be reimbursed at this calculated percentage shall include, but are not limited to:

- a. costs of staff devoted to administrative matters, including, but not limited to, clerical, reception, and accounting activities, to the extent such costs are not accounted for under section 2.1;
- b. storage;
- c. equipment rental and maintenance;
- d. depreciation of equipment and furniture owned by EDUCATION FUND;
- e. premiums for liability and other insurance;
- f. general office supplies;
- g. general telephone service, exclusive of long distance charges;
- h. computer and word-processing supplies;
- i. professional staff, board, and committee travel not accounted for under section 2.1;
- j. photocopying not accounted for under section 2.1;
- k. local taxes;
- l. subscriptions and other publications;
- m. rent and utilities;
- n. internet access costs; and
- o. legal expenses.

If and when PEN shall use the services of any employee or contractor who is not also an employee or contractor of FUND, PEN shall pay an additional amount of rent in proportion to these employees' or contractors' use of FUND's office facilities.

2.4 Payment of Joint Fundraising Costs. PEN's payment for joint fundraising costs incurred by FUND shall be based on the proportion of the amount raised for PEN in the fundraising effort.

2.5 Time of Payment. PEN shall make payment to FUND of the amounts due under this Agreement no less frequently than quarterly on the basis of detailed invoices submitted by FUND. Amounts in arrears for more than thirty (30) days shall earn interest at the rate of 1% per month.

2.6 Additional Payment in Event of Adverse IRS Determinations. In the event that the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") shall determine that the amounts paid by PEN to FUND for goods and services pursuant to this Agreement constitute less than fair market value within the meaning of section 56.4911-3(c)(3)(A) of the Internal Revenue Regulations, then PEN shall pay to FUND the difference between the amounts paid under the Agreement and the fair market value of such goods and services as determined by the IRS. In addition, in the event that the IRS shall determine that all or any part of the amounts paid by PEN to FUND for goods and services pursuant to this Agreement shall constitute unrelated business taxable income within the meaning of Code sections 511-513, PEN shall pay to FUND the amount of taxes, penalties and interest, if any, determined by the IRS to be owed by FUND in respect of such income.

2.7 Change in IRS Requirements. It is the intention of FUND and PEN that the method of calculating PEN's share of the expenses incurred by FUND on its behalf shall conform in all material respects with the requirements imposed by the IRS with respect to similarly situated organizations. In the event that FUND is advised by counsel or other tax advisor that the method of calculating PEN's share of expenses set forth in this Agreement no longer conforms with such requirements, the Agreement shall be amended to conform with all IRS requirements.

SECTION 3: LICENSE OF MARKS.

3.1 Definition. For purposes of this Agreement, "FUND's Trademarks" shall mean the registered and unregistered trademarks identified on Exhibit A hereto.

3.2 Grant. Subject to the terms and conditions herein, FUND hereby grants to PEN a non-exclusive, non-transferable, license for the duration of this Agreement to use FUND's Trademarks in connection with its activities to improve access to justice, subject to restrictions set forth in this Agreement (the "License").

3.3 Ownership. PEN acknowledges that FUND's Trademarks are owned exclusively by FUND, and that all use by PEN of FUND's Trademarks shall inure to FUND's benefit. PEN acknowledges and agrees that PEN's right to use FUND's Trademarks is only by virtue of this agreement, and that PEN shall acquire no rights in or to FUND's Trademarks through PEN's use. PEN shall not attack FUND's title or any rights of FUND to FUND's Trademarks and PEN shall assist FUND to the extent necessary in the procurement of any protection of FUND's rights to use FUND's Trademarks. FUND shall own all applications and registrations resulting from FUND's Trademarks. PEN shall not use or authorize any third party to use FUND's Trademarks except as approved in advance by FUND.

3.4 Quality Standards. PEN agrees to maintain such quality standards as shall be prescribed by FUND in the conduct of the business operations with which the FUND's trademarks are used. PEN agrees to supply FUND with specimens of all uses of FUND's Trademarks upon request. FUND shall comply with all applicable laws and regulations and obtain all appropriate government approvals pertaining to the sale, distribution and advertising of the goods and services covered by this License. PEN will not engage in any deceptive, misleading or unethical practices that are or might be detrimental to FUND or FUND's Trademarks. FUND may terminate this License at any time if PEN fails to abide by FUND's quality standards or otherwise breaches the terms of this License.

3.5 Infringement. In the event that PEN learns of any infringement, threatened infringement, or passing-off of FUND's Trademarks or that any third party claims or alleges that FUND's Trademarks are liable to cause deception or confusion to the public, PEN shall notify FUND giving particulars thereof and PEN shall provide necessary information and assistance to FUND in the event that FUND decides that proceedings should be commenced or defended.

SECTION 4: MAILING LISTS

4.1 Availability. FUND shall make its full mailing list available to PEN for PEN use, subject to the restrictions contained within this Agreement.

4.2 Consideration. In consideration for the use of FUND mailing list, PEN shall provide FUND unlimited use of all unique names added to the PEN mailing list in the course of PEN's mailing list development. If within two (2) years from the date of this agreement, the number of unique names made available to FUND by PEN does not equal or exceed the number of names initially made available to PEN by FUND, PEN shall pay to FUND the fair market value of the shortfall in names.

SECTION 5: MISCELLANEOUS.

5.1 Termination. This Agreement may be terminated by either party at any time, upon provision of thirty (30) days' notice in writing to the other party.

5.2 Integration; Modification. This Agreement sets forth the entire agreement between the parties, and replaces and supersedes all other contracts, agreements and understandings, written or oral, relating to the subject matter hereof. The Agreement may not be changed or modified except by written instrument executed by both parties.

5.3 Governing Law. The Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the District of Columbia.

5.4 Assignment. This Agreement is not assignable by either party.

5.5 Effective Date. The provisions of this Agreement shall apply to all applicable expenses incurred since January 1, 2012.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have signed their names on the day and year before mentioned.

APPENDIX C: MODEL GRANT AGREEMENT FOR GRANT FROM 501(C)(3) TO 501(C)(4)

The grant to [name of 501(c)(4) (“Grantee”)] from [name of 501(c)(3)] (“Grantor”) is for the explicit purposes described in Grantee’s request and subject to Grantee’s acceptance of the terms described herein.

WHEREAS, Grantor is a nonprofit corporation organized and operated for charitable purposes within the meaning of section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (“Code”) and desires to provide a grant to Grantee to conduct educational activities;

WHEREAS, the parties hereto recognize that every effort shall be made to safeguard the integrity of Grantor’s tax status under section 501(c)(3) of the Code;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises of the parties, the parties agree as follows:

Grant Purpose: This grant is for the exclusive purpose of supporting Grantee’s charitable, scientific, or educational activities.

Amount: The total amount of the grant is $ _____, to be paid in installments according to the following schedule: _____.

[or]

Funds will be disbursed to Grantee upon receipt of the signed Terms of Grant.

Expenditure of Grant Funds: The funds provided may be spent only in accordance with the provisions of Grantee’s funding request and budget as approved. The program and budget are subject to modification only with Grantor’s prior written approval. Questions that may arise about the program’s responsibilities, goals, expected results, and workplan are resolved by reference to these documents. Grantor reserves the right to exercise oversight, in whatever manner it deems suitable with respect to Grantee’s use of these funds.

Grantee shall not engage in any activity on behalf of Grantor that jeopardized Grantor’s status as a nonprofit charity qualified to receive tax-deductible contributions under section 501(c)(3) of the Code. Without limiting the generality of the preceding sentence, Grantee will not intervene in any election or support or oppose any political party or candidate for public office.

Reversion of Grant Funds: Grantee will return to Grantor any unexpended funds at the close of the grant period. Funds also shall be promptly returned:

- If Grantor determines that Grantee has not performed in accordance with the Terms of Grant, and approved program and budget.
- If Grantee loses its exemption from federal income tax as provided for under section 501(c)(4) of the Code.

Reports to Grantor: Grantee will furnish Grantor with monthly written reports addressing all points listed in the following guidelines. These reports will supply sufficient information for Grantor to determine that the grant is being used for the purposes intended and for Grantor to fulfill its own public reporting responsibilities.

Progress reports are designed to provide periodic assessments of activities being supported by Grantor. They should be submitted on a monthly basis and should include the following information:

- A summary of receipts and expenditures. Each report shall provide an itemized statement of costs incurred by Grantee in performance of this agreement. Reports on other functions performed under this contract shall be submitted from time to time and in a form satisfactory to Grantor.

- A description of work conducted by Grantee during the period in pursuit of the general objectives set forth in the grant proposal.
- An evaluation of the impact and results of work undertaken and an assessment of progress that has been made in meeting stated goals. Grantee is encouraged to report not only the positive results of its activities, but also any problems that have arisen along with a description of measures that have or will be put into practice to resolve them.
- A description and explanation of any changes in the nature, methodology, and/or objectives of the project as presented in the initial funding proposal.

Grantee shall keep records satisfactory to Grantor related to performance of this Agreement. Grantee shall make all books, ledgers, accounts, files, computer records, and personnel involved in performing functions under this contract available to Grantor or its designated representatives, auditors, or legal counsel to determine compliance with the terms of the contract and applicable law.

If this Agreement sets forth Grantee's understanding of the terms of this grant, please indicated agreement to such terms by having the enclosed copy of this letter countersigned by an appropriate officer of the organization and returned to Grantor. It is also understood that by countersigning this letter Grantee confirms that there has been no change in its qualification as an organization exempt from income tax pursuant to section 501(c)(4) of the Code. If any change in classification occurs, Grantee must notify Grantor immediately.
